COLLECTION MADE NEARLY 200 YEARS AGO

March Number of The Smart Set is Distinguished by the Extenordinnry Variety of Fiction Composing It.

A new edition of a genuine, old favorite, out by W. T. Henderson, New York City. collection is said to have been made In 1739 by John Mottley and published under the present title. Additions have since been made to the collection, some of the stories bearing dates as late as 1826. The present volume is an unabridged edition of the original, with an index added. "Time does not wither nor custom change" the infinite variety of storied jest and subtle repartee between the covers of the book. Though old enough to be smothered with the dust of ages, many of them are doing duty today as original creations and bringing applause and reputation to post prandial wits. A cursory examination revealed thirty-two bright stories now afloat and applied to events or people of our day which had their origin in the eighteenth century. As a sample take the stock story of grand army campfires related as an actual occurrence in the civil war. It is No. 13 in Joe Miller's collection of ancient chestnuts and reads as follows:

Two sailors, the one Irish, the other English, agreed reciprocally to take care of each other in case of either being wounded in an action then about to commence. It was not long before the Englishman's leg was shot off by a cannon ball, and on asking Paddy to carry him to the doctor, according to their agreement, the other very readily compiled, but had scarcely gotten his wounded companion on his back when a second ball struck off the poor fellow's against Milligan unless the latter makes head. Paddy, through the noise and bustle, had not perceived his friend's last misfortune, but continued to make the best of his way to the surgeon. An officer, observing him with his headless trunk, asked him where he was going. "To the doctor," says Paddy. "The doctor!" says the officer "why, blockhead, the man has lost his head." On hearing this he flung the body from his shoulders and looked at it very attentively. "By my soul," he says, "he told me it was his leg, but I was a fool to believe him, for he was always a great

The March number of The Smart Set is distinguished by the extraordinary variety of the fiction composing it-a variety that is altogether meritorious. In the novelette, The Interference of Miss Jane," by Robert Adger Bowen, one finds an exquisite love story, chiefly of the south, though sometimes the scene is shifted to New York. It has a real atmosphere, a real plot, real action-in short, a story that is both powerful and fascinating. In contrast to it follows 'Tomorrow at Dawn," by Rose K. Weekes, a wonderful tragedy of one father's love for his child. Again, "The Sentimentalists," by Ruth Milne, is written in lighter vein, with gentler themo, but equally excellent of its kind. Other stories that command attention and admiration are: "By a Strange Road," by Kate Jordan, strikingly original in its narrative of a desperate and loving woman; "Mammon's Match," by James Branch Cabell, a thoroughly entertaining piece of comedy work, and unusu ally clever; "The Divvil Wagon," by Ernest Jarrold, a most amusing tale; "The Hypocrite," by Edith Elmer Wood, a situation of solemn and compelling strength; "The Mask of Comedy," by Stanhope Same, a story that is unique in its sensational plot; "The Second Mrs. Nichols," by Elizabeth Enight Tompking a singularly psychological study, and "The Man of smiles," an exquisite sketch that breathes the air of Paris. In its entirety this number of The Smart Set is a compendium of the highest value in fiction and in verse.

"The Apex." by Thomas B. Gould, is devoted to religious discussion from a very broad point of view. Mr. Gould, who is a man in his early 60s, says of himself: "I have in my day believed almost everything that others have believed, and now I am going to know instead of believe." This is his first appearance as an author, but his subjects are treated with such seriousness and devotion as to show deep study and practical application. The book will well repay a careful perusal. Richard G. Badger

"A Harmless Revolution; or, A Well Known Family in Trouble," is the history of the trials and tribulations of the "Punctuation family of the English language," a related by Grace Miller White. Each mem ber of that family receives due considera tion and the story is related in a manne that will be very pleasing and impressiv to the younger readers, for whose instrution it is intended. The book is profusel illustrated and the binding is very attrac tive. It is published by the J. S. Ogilvic Publishing Company.

"Random Verse" is a collection of poetr from the pen of Herman Knickerbocke Viele, who is the author of "The Inn the Silver Moon," "The Last of the Knick erbockers" and "Myra of the Pines." The subjects treated are numerous and the book is an attractive little volume. It is published by Brentano's, Union square,

FLOCKMASTER IS IN TROUBLE Man Who Bought Nebraska Sheep Accused of Violating Quarantine Law.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Feb. 16 .- (Special.) A delegation of Pine Bluffs sheepmen came to Cheyenne today and filed a complaint with the State Board of Sheep Commisdoners against Joseph F. Milligan of Cheyenne, charging him with bringing a band "Joe Miller's Jest Book," has been brought of scabby sheep into Laramle county from Nebraska. The state board is investigating the matter and will probably prosecute Milligan for violating the state laws. Members of the firm of Wilkinson Bros of Pine Bluffs allege that Milligan purchased 700 head of ewes from the Bennett Live Stock company and trailed the animals from Kimball, Neb., to a point near the Little Horse Creek postoffice in this ounty on or about January 1; that the sheep were given to J. L. Johnson to run on shares and that the sheep were turned in with a large bunch owned by the Wilkinsons, which were also being run on shares by Johnson; and that on February 3 John Wilkinson discovered two cases of scab among the 700 sheep owned by Milligan.

The owners claim that the 700 sheep were dipped twice before being trailed into Wy-ming and were pronounced clean. Milligan did not netify the State Board of Sheep Commissioners of his intention of bringing sheep into the state and he thereby violated the state laws. He also violated the rule of the board which states that sheep shall not be trailed or shipped into a clean county, and Laramle is one of Wyoming's clean counties.

State and federal inspectors will go to Little Horse creek, quarantine the sheep and treat them.

John Wilkinson threatens to bring suit satisfactory settlement at once.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.-There was an usually large number of representatives in their seats today on the convening of that body. The usual hum of voices was notably subdued, as the topic of conversation related almost exclusively to the death of Senator Hanna,

Mr. Grosvenor (O.), after securing unaninorrow, then offered the following resoluions, which were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the house of representatives has heard with profound sorrow of the death of the Hon. Marcus A. Hanna, a senator of the United States from the state of Ohio.
Resolved, further, That the house of representatives accepts the invitation of the senate to attend the funeral services of the late. Hon. Marcus A. Hanna, to be held in the senate chamber tomorrow noon, and that the speaker of the house appoint a committee of twenty-five members to act in conjunction with a committee of the senate to make the necessary arrangements and accompany the remains to the place and accompany the remains to the place of burial.

Resolved, as a further mark of respect, That the house do now adjourn. Speaker Cannon appointed the following nembers of the house as a committee to represent that body during the funeral of Senator Hanna: The entire Ohlo delegation and Representatives Burkett of Nebrasks, Lucking of Michigan, Dalzell of Pennsylvania, Watson of Indiana, Burke of South Dakota, Currier of New Hampshire, Sherman of New York, Rodenburg of Illinois, McCleary of Minnesota, Wiley of Alabama.

A pathetic incident attended the reading of the resolutions. E. L. Lampson, the The Catholics of Gary and vicinity will reading clerk, formerly a clerk of the house hold a meeting on the afternoon of Febru- of representatives of the state of Ohio, and formerly lieutenant governor of that state, reported the resolutions to the house. SENATE GIVES WAY TO ITS SORROW. Foraker of Ohio Announces the Death of Former Collegue. WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.-Formal anof the death of Senator Hanna was made in the senate today immediately after the opening prayer. The duty of making the official statement of the senator's death fell to Mr. Foraker, Mr. Hanna's colleague.

Most of the senators were in their seats before the senate was called to order and their faces bore traces of the sorrow which all felt. The galleries, too, were crowded.

The opening prayer was delivered by the senate chaplain, Dr. Edward Everett Hale. On motion of Mr. Aldrich, the formality of reading the journal of the preceding day was omitted and Mr. Foraker was recognized to make his announcement. Mr. Foraker said:

Mr. President: I have a painful duty to perform. It is that of making formal announcement to the death of my late colleague, Marcus A. Hanna.

"The event was not unexpected at the time it occurred. For months past it has been evident to all who were associated with him that he was in falling health. He was urgently and repeatedly advised to desist from his labors, and make a special effort to resist his maladies, but his strong will power, hopeful nature and fidelity to duty were such that he disregarded all such suggestions, and continued at his post until three weeks ago, when he was prostrated by typhoid fever.

His friends then became justly alarmed. That alarm spread throughout the country and in response to unusual manifestations of public sympathy his physicians bulletined his conditions daily and finally, almost hourly.

He is mourned by all his countrymen—by

of public sympathy his physicians bulletined his conditions daily and finally, almost hourly.

He is mourned by all his countrymen—by his political associates, not because he was their great organizing leader, who repeatedly led them to victory, but also and more especially because he had gained their affections and reigned in their hearts as a favorite—by his political opponents because they are chivalrous and generous enough to experience secretow when a brave man falls, though he be of the opposition, and because they recognized in him a bold and fearless foeman, who commanded their respect and excite their admiration.

It is unnecessary to speak in this presence of the great loss his death has accessed to the great loss

For the present I content myself with offering the following resolutions, for which I ask present consideration.

The resolutions offered by Mr. Foraker were as follows;

Resolved. That a committee of twenty-five senators, of whom the president pro tempore shall be one, be appointed by the presiding officer to take measures for superintending the funeral of Mr. Hanna, which shall take place in the senate chamber at 12 o clock on Wednesday, February 17, and that the senate will attend the same.

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect the remains be removed from Washington to Cleveland, O., for burial in charge of the sergeant-at-arms, attended by the committee, who shall have full power to carry these resolutions into effect, and that the necessary expenses in connection therewith be paid out of the contingent fund of the senate.

Resolved. That the secretary communicate these proceedings to the house of representatives and invite from the senate.

Resolved, That invitations be extended mittee to act with the committee from the senate.

Resolved, That invitations be extended to the president of the United States and members of his cabinet, the chief justice and associate justices of the supreme court of the United States, the diplomatic corps, the secretary of state, the admiral of the navy and the lieutenant general of the army, to attend the services in the senate chamber.
