Judged by the social calendar, Lent is having its full effect in Omaha, but one must not depend too much on published announcements of the social intentions of people. The penitential season is entitled a certain amount of deference, but the smart folks long ago found out that they can keep Lent, to all outward appearances at least, and at the same time not forego an unreasonable extent the enjoyment of those things they find pleasant at other seasons of the year. It has been long since the forty days received any more formal recognition than the abandonment of those larger affairs which call together the just and unjust of the social body, for there are those who are so old-fashioned as to have definite notions about matters at her residence, 1424 North Twenty-sixth of religion and who scruple to lightly put aside the obligation laid upon them by the faith they profess, and to these society pays the tribute of respect by not announcing its chiefest functions. And, then, and Harney. everybody is in a mood to welcome the brief respite from a series of balls and dinners and is willing to be content with just a little in the way of doings, enough prevent absolute stagnation and not enough to excite any unpleasant comment. Thus those who are really inclined to be devout from Ash Wednesday until Easter Sunday has passed are allowed to do so without being disturbed by the clamor of those who do not feel any especial inclination to contrition at this or any other season of the year, while the latter are allowed to give over their time to bridge and other "intellectual" pursuits with the added unetlon of knowing that they are not likely to be disturbed or to disturb any-

The early part of the last week was busy with the affairs that must be gotten out of the way before the dawn of Wednesday, and two days and two nights of the rush found the smart folks quite ready to welcome the time of social inactivity. But Thursday evening found them ready to go again, at least most of them did go, for the Boyd theater entrance witnessed a jam that evening such as is seldom seen in Omaha, while the waiting line of carriages on Friday and Saturday nights indicated that the theater isn't exactly enumerated among those things that must be given up. few days with his parents last week. Aside from some of those formalities named over last week the women have determined that something may be done without seriously abrogating Lenten obligations and just a few things are given out for the coming week. It is only fair to say that these are of the quiet order and It is not outside the line of facts to say

> The 181 Nebraska grain and lumber men who went to New Orleans to attend the Mardi Gras festivities, returned yesterday As many of them as could be rounded up found difficulty in securing language to portray their impressions of the time they had. Still, the trip had its "bitters," for some at least. Several of the contingent brought back well developed colds. They attributed the affection to the change of climate and the wet, cloudy weather in the

> "But for all that, the trip was a good one and we are glad we took it," said Charles McCloud of York, who was accompanied by Mrs. McCloud on the journey. "It is a great, treat to be in New Orleans, or 'N'worleens,' as the good natured southerner says, during that great festival, Mardi Grass.

"The city is jammed and everybody is out for a good time. And it takes those southerners to have a good time, too. Why, Tuesday New Orleans, with its 300,000 and more of people, actually suspended business of all lines, to turn out and make that gala day of the week a success.

"People down there are never too busy to be courteous and sind. That's one thing I like about them. A couple of us fellows were wanting to find a certain place and asked a man in a business house where it was. Now, up here in the north we would have casually directed the stranger and gone on about our busy business, but that man put on his hat and walked down the street a couple of blocks with us to make sure that we would find the place we were looking for. That's the way they do it. "Most people who go to the Mardi Gras have trouble in getting good hotel accommodations, not because there arn't hotels there, but because the city slways is crowded, but we did not have that obstacle to contend with. We simply staid in our private train, a Missouri Pacific train in which we had gone from Omaha. It was stationed on the Texas & Pacific Mrs. Albert Cahn is in New York visit- tracks, a convenient distance from the scenes of operation, so we were all right in that regard. "One visiting the south, and especially New Orleans, is struck with the need of good sanitary conditions, such as we have Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Neely are back from in the north. Of course things are better now than they were a few years ago down there, but there's lots of room for improvement yet. New Orleans is particularly bad in this respect. But it's a good business city, and so are many others down there, Memphis, for Instance. Fort Smith, Ark., struck me as about the cleanest and liveliest little city of any I saw."

The special train was under the personal supervision of Tom Godfrey of the Missouri Pacific and J. O. Phillippi was aboard to ald Mr. Godfrey in seeing that it didn't run off the track.

Miss Dunster, who has been studying for month with Mr. George Leykauf of Detroit, has returned and will reopen her studio for lessons at 621 Paxton block, Wednesday, February 24.
