HEADS THE LIST OF GAINFUL OCCUPATIONS

Manufacturing and Mechanical Pursuits a Close Second-Other Professions Strung Along in the Distance.

The statistics of occupations of the citisens of the United States, as indicated by the twelfth cansus, have just been compiled and published by the general government. They are overwhelming in their dimensions. A huge book, of more than 840 pages, is crowded down to tiny margins with the thousands upon thousands of figures, and yet the director of the census apologetically states in his introduction to this ponderous tome that the fact that the act enabling the census to be taken was presed so short a time before the month set for the event (Fune, 1900) caused the results he presents to be inadequate and incomplete. Buch a state of affairs would not the apparent to the layman. Once he has settled the plan and score of the book within his mental capacities, it must seem to him wonderfully sweeping

It has been the aim of these busy interrogation points, the census takers, to ascertain the occupation of every person in the United States of more than 10 years of age. They were warned by the director of the census to be complete in ascertaining this branch of their results. Persons working in a browery, for instance, were not necessarily to be classed as brewers. The men who work in the brewery cooperages, to elte a lucid instance, were to be called coopers and not brewers. Similar distinctions were made in the case of farming industries. Any person working on a farm for wages alone, even though that person be the farmer's sen himself, was to be classed as a farm laborer. It takes a working interest in the farm to be classed as a farmer. In such careful and definite ways as this have the occupation statistics of the twelfile densus been compiled. It would seem that, any apologies

Second in Runk. Next to the farmer in numerical strength stands the manufacturing and mechanical pursuits. There are 7,112,304 persons actively engaged in these wonderfully waried occupations and classifications, so extensive in all their ramifications that a mere list of these would enumerate more than 160 forms of skilled and ordinary artisanship, ranging through all the different forms of manufactures.

Domestic and personal service comesnext, 5.650,778 persons being enrolled as barbers and bartenders, watchmen, policemen, firemen and waiters, all occupations open to the frequent reception of pourboires. In addition to these, under this lassification, are gathered the soldiers, sailors and marines of the regular army, 128,706 in all.

Fourth position in this great rank goes to trade and transportation, which gathers within its numbers 4,778,233 persons, or about the present population of this city. This includes an army of steam and street ratiroad emplo, retailers, sailors and their officers at the like. Even the undertakers come ...thin this classification, A final position in line is given to the men and women who are engaged in professional service. There are comparatively few of these, 1,364,536 persons all told. among the Ta. Once having divided his 29,287,070 workers into their varied occupations, the director of the census proceeds along other lines. He finds that of these 20,073,233 were engaged in gainful occupations in the coninental United States and that these comprised one-half of all persons 10 years of age and over in the country, and nearly two-fifths of the entire population. Of this number 28,753,536 were males and 5,319,397 were females. The former constitute 80 per cent., or four-fifths, of the male population of 10 years or over, and 61.3 per cent, or more than three-fifths of the total male population. The latter represented 18.8 per cent and 14.2 per cent, respectively, of the corresponding totals for females. Percentuge of Increuse. The twelfth census shows that there was an increased proportion of gainful workers for each sex in 1900, as compared with 1880 and 1890. The percentage of the total population of continental United States, 10 years of age and over, so engaged was 10.2 per cent in 1996, 49.3 per cent in 1890 and the decadent continental nations of Europe,

Two methods are now in vogue, both having the same principle, but differing in detail. In the old days of sails and smooth-bore guns the invariable rule-and the only rule the gun captains knew-was this: "Fire at the top begins to roll toward the target), and aim at the snemy's water line."

This rule lasted far into the age of steam and turret guns and has only recently ing difficulties, for at one or two points been supplianted by "continuous aim fir-the cableway will have to span gorges ing." or the art of keeping a gun trained ing," or the art of keeping a gun trained on the target, regardless of the oscillation of the yearel, during the whole or a por-

The other method of instruction is with the Morris tube, which consists of a small gallery rifle fitted on the gun, to take the place of the dotter's pencil.

So proficient have the bluejackets become in handling the turret guns that in actual target practice on board the Alabama a thirteen-inch gun is loaded and Senator Suiffkins, roused himself and fired in thirty-eight seconds. FREAKS OF LIGHTNING.

Thomas Seltzer, who was brought to the University hospital from Clifton Heights, Philadelphia, after having been struck by a bolt of lightning, was marked by the electric fluid in the most peculiar manner, He was hit in the middle of the forehead. There the electric current divided, half going down each side of the face and leaving a perfectly marked horseshoe above part. If it fun't asking too much I would his nose. The divided charge then passed down his body, along each leg and from his feet to the earth. Seitzer's shoes were literally ripped to pieces by the discharge the electricity from him. In this age uses are to be found for many things which were formerly regarded as valueless or even a bother. It is not so long since cottonseed, from which is now extracted pure imported olive oil, was a source of expense in having to be hauled away like the sawdust of the sawmills Surely there are better uses for the goat of Antonio Pasquale, at Washington, than to polson him, he having swallowed two considerable sticks of dynamite. It is through fear of his indiscriminate or untimely butting and consequent explosion that the neighbors are trying to persuade Antonio to mix struchnia with his food. Naturally, these neighbors are imprisoned in their homes, the goat, with an apparent sense vised by Captain Percy Scott of the British of his own importance, parading up and navy. The dotter is a mechanical device down the street with a wicked leer and an which causes a small target to move invitation to the dogs to come within across the face of a gup, with a combined butting reach. The momentary self-interest of the neighbors should not be allowed to determine the use of this goat. It would serve their purpose quite as well should he be gently removed. Already the owner of a fruit farm in the Wilmington suburbs has made an offer for the animated torpedo. His scheme is to advertise the presence of the The offer has not been accepted only be cause it is stipulated that Antonio shall deliver the goat at the farm in good order. This proposed devotion of so valuable an animal to strictly private uses is not in harmony with the tendency toward as much socialism as would reserve to the public service whatever is well adapted to IL Could the goat be kept in a padded kennel he might be invaluable in times of riot, when it is usual to employ militia.
