Mr. Knox reviewed the attitude of the republican party toward the great corporations and gave in detail the situation as it confronted President Roosevelt at the time the BLECTION FRAUDS IN CANADA question of the legality of the Northern Securities company was brought up.

After giving a history of the case and reviewing the legislation by the last congress the subject of relation of monopolies, Mr. Knox said:

What is the democratic view of these important accomplishments and the subject to which they relate? Do they claim that the republican administration has gone too far or is it that we have not gone far enough?

The former attorney general then quoted from the New York democratic platform of April 12 last, upon which he said Judge of the steamer Minnie Al., cartying a the Parker stood while seeking delegates to the national convention and which declared that "corporations chartered by the state must be subject to just regulation by the state." Mr. Knox then said: Judge Parker says: "Leave the trusts to the common law," witch means leave them alone, as common law furnishes no remedy to prevent combinations in restraint of trade, while the democratic platform de-nounces rebates and discriminations by transportation companies "as the most potent agency in promoting and strength-ening these unlawful completes against trade." When you consider what has been done since January, 1903, you can under-stand that the democracy is only now ap-proving that which the republican party has so effectually accompliance. to the military district of Vilna, which, as already announced by the Associated Press. is going out as a part of the second Manchurian army, under the former chief of the Vilna district, Genera! Grippenberg The corps probably will leave Vilna on November 8 direct for Harbin. Emperor Nicholas has received no report from General Stoessel, the military commander at Port Arthur, since October 10. A correspondent of the Russky Listok sends to that paper a graphic account of the fighting by General Bilderling's corps on October 12, when the Russian right flank was broken. It now develops that disaster was averted solely by the timely arrival of General Soebele's Sixteenth Siberian corps, composed almost entirely of reservists, many regiments of which were experiencing their first taste of actual war. The correspondent telegraphs that General Oku's desperate onslaught forced back General Bilderling and forced Stakhovsk's cavalry, who were holding the right. The situation was most critical, but the Sixth corps which had been held in reserve, promptly came up and supported Bilderling, and things assumed a brighter aspect. The fighting was exceedingly furious. Two reserve corps regiments, which had never before been under fire, bore the brunt of the Japanese advance and obstinately held their ground. The following day the battle was resumed with the fullest intensity. The Japanese threw themselves headlong against the positions of the Sixth and Sev enteenth corps. The fighting continued the whole day, despite a terrific downpour of rain and a fearful thunderstorm. A Japanese battery dashed out from General Oku's right and opened a deadly fire upon the Russian trenches until the Tenth artillery brigade came into action. JAPANESE LOSS AT PORT ARTHUR

On the left the Russians are in a good position on a high hill overlooking the shakhe river which they have held since October 15, despite an almost continuous combardment and frequent infantry atncks.

On the right the Russians are using mortars in an endeavor to dislodge the Japanese from a small hill in the last plain. The recent rains have flooded the rivers. Owing to these floods it would be neces sary to use pontoons in crossing the Shakhe river, which has not been bridged.
