"Tastes of smokers have changed very much in the last few years," said a tobacce retailer recently. He had just succeeded in finding a cigar for a fastidious amoker. "We have very few of the old Havana cigar smokers left. Now, that man who mauled over the contents of half a dezen boxes, said he wanted an imported cigar. He ended by taking a cigar made in this city and he declared that it was one of the best he had ever tusted. "I don't know how to account for the change, but it is a fact that men whe years age would take nothing but a cigar made of pure Havana tebucce nowadays want cigars that are doctored and faked. Sometimes I think the cigarette habit is responsible for it. Cigarettes are being smoked more than they ever were and they have created a peculiar taste among smokers. "Then se many cigars are doctored. These create an appetite which when ence acquired spoils all other tastes. "Some years ago men used to ask for Havann cigars and would take nothing else. They could tell a good cigar the moment they saw one and none of these domestic things could be palmed off on
