

MILWAUKEE'S RICH COACH

New Overland Limited Observation Car Passes Through Omaha First Time.

RESEMBLES REAL PALACE ON WHEELS

Does Away with Barber Shop on Fast Coast Train, Substituting Other Comforts and Accommodations.

One of the richest coaches that has crossed the continent in recent years arrived in Omaha Monday morning over the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road and went west with the Overland Limited.

With the adoption of this coach the observation car now used on the Overland will be discontinued. This also will do away with the barbershop, which was one of the features of the coach.

Looking the entire length of the coach the general appearance is cathedral-like in its architectural beauty. There is in the rear an observation platform of nearly twice the dimensions of those at present in use on the Overland.

The observation parlor is provided with richly upholstered furniture. Ground glass chandeliers hang from the ceiling and there are lamps in electric buttons on every chair.

Forward of this is the smoking compartment. These are supplied with elegant furniture upholstered in buff-colored leather.

There are stations and writing desks of the most exquisite pattern and the smoking apartments are enclosed by elegant glass partitions, so that the view is not obstructed by the aisle.

Stained glass windows enhance the interior effect by day and add to the exterior splendor of the car at night.

Ornate mirrors are supplied at convenient points of the car and the women's compartment is supplied with restrooms and permanent stationary writing desks are supplied with embossed stationery.

Silk tapestries, expensive imported woods, a network of pillars and other architectural effects add to the sumptuousness of the interior.

The Union Pacific is adopting the same style of car and future Overland passengers will have the same accommodations to the end of their destination, whether they complete the journey from Omaha over the Northwestern or the Milwaukee.

Rich Chinese Tea Merchant. Among the passengers who occupied the observation coach of the Overland when it arrived in the city from Chicago was Tso Tun Min, a wealthy Chinese tea merchant, who is making a tour of this country for the first time.

Mr. Min was gorgeously dressed in purple and wore the usual tassel which designates his financial standing in the Orient.

Mr. Min arrived in New York from Great Britain about a week ago and when he reaches Canton he will have circled the world, completing a journey which has taken about three months.

He expects to spend some time in San Francisco, where the firm has a branch house. The firm also has branch houses in London and in other parts of Europe.

Mr. Min is much impressed with what he has seen of America and spoke of it as a "much remarkable country." He was extremely pleased with the deference that has been shown him everywhere and says he intends to make another trip soon and spend more time in America when he comes again.

Referring to the war, he said he thought that it would prove very costly for both sides and that Japan is already staggered by the expense of the war.

He said Japan is surprised by the life and treasure that she has cost up to the present time, as he expected a shorter struggle.

China, he said, has had no intention of taking sides with Japan in the struggle. He thought China cannot afford to do it for political reasons and that the hope of its integrity, no matter which way the fortunes of war go, depends upon its maintaining a perfectly neutral attitude.

He said that Japan hoped to destroy Russia's fleet early in the war and then take Port Arthur, but when it found itself unable to do so, it realized that it had a long and dogged land struggle on hand.

No one, he says, but he who has been at Port Arthur and seen its miles and miles of costly defenses can gain any conception of what it really means to take the place.

THIEVES OVERLOOK MONEY. Visit Henry's Store and Get Plunder, but Fail to Discover Some Hidden Treasures.

Henry F. Klesler's stationery and book store, at 1807 Farnam street, was robbed of goods and money aggregating about $100, as near as can now be estimated, Sunday night.

The burglars got only $150 in cash, the remainder of their booty being in fountain pens of the finest make and probably some leather goods.

Mr. Klesler is unable to say just how many fountain pens are missing, but one whole tray and several out of other trays are gone, and it may be placing the estimate too low to say that $100 will cover the loss.

Burglar insurance was not carried, so the loss is complete. From the fact that more plunder was not taken and that a considerable sum of money hid in the cash register was not discovered, together with other features of the affair, Mr. Klesler is convinced the work was done by crude and inexperienced hands.

He had concealed a large sum of money in the cash register and left only $150 in the drawer open to view. This was taken, but the other was not touched. His safe was opened and every envelope, no matter what its contents, was opened and examined. His office floor was littered with these things. The case containing the fountain pens was well filled, but only one tray was entirely emptied and scattering pens picked up from other trays.

WOMAN LOSES TEETH IN FIGHT

Drops Her Masticators While Swapping Brass Knuckle Blows with Another Woman.

"Drunk and disturbing the peace and dignity of the community by fighting and using loud and unusual noises was the charge against Hattie Vert and Mollie Wicks of 409 North Fourteenth street when the women were arraigned before Police Judge Berke.

The women were fined $10 and costs each for their little outdoor specialty. The humorous part of the engagement was the fact that the women resorted to brass knuckles instead of pulling each other's hair.

When the smoke had cleared away both of the women's faces looked the worse for wear and Miss Vert reported when she reached police headquarters that she lost her false teeth in the excitement. There is some difference of opinion just what caused the trouble.

One report from the front says one of the other a recipe for removing the warts and the recipe failed to work as claimed, but this report is unconfirmed.

HICKEY FAILS TO SHOW UP

South Omaha Man Accused of Assaulting Strike Breaker Not in Court When Wanted.

John Hickey, a striker indicted for committing an assault upon a deaf and dumb strike breaker in July last, in violation of the federal injunction, was to have had his hearing before Judge Munger this morning, but he failed to appear in an appearance and his bond was declared forfeited.

Hickey was arrested on the complaint of assault, given his preliminary hearing before United States Commissioner Anderson, bound over to the federal grand jury and was indicted for "impeding the administration of justice" and "assault in violation of the federal injunction."

MOTHER SUES FOR HER SON

Asks for Thirty Thousand Dollars as Damages from Street Railway Company.

The Omaha & Council Bluffs Railway company is asked to pay the sum of $30,000 in a case now pending before Judge Estelle and a jury for alleged personal injuries to Robert Sandberg, a small boy, April 3, 1903. The suit is brought by the boy's mother, who asserts that the lad is disabled for life and has had his mind permanently affected.

The accident is said to have occurred at the road fund are streets, where the boy got off a street car, started to walk across the opposite-bound track and was struck by another car. Of the damages $50 is for doctors' bills.

Chloroform for Toothache. Nora Clem of 402 North Fourteenth street, well known in police circles, created something of a stir at her boarding place yesterday by taking an overdose of chloroform to relieve the throbbing of a severe toothache. Miss Clem was found in an unconscious condition by some of the occupants of the house, who at first reported the woman had attempted suicide.
