Prisoners Saw Off Bars and Are Nearly Ready to Leave When Discovered.

IS REVEALED ACCIDENTALLY

Young Man Serving Sentence for Theft Tells His Mother that He is Not a Party to Scheme and News Reaches Sheriff.

Timely discovery prevented a wholesale delivery of prisoners from the county jail last night. One bar in the west window of the lower corridor, partly sawn through, was all that stood between the eighteen men confined there and liberty when the plot was discovered. The discovery was made merely by chance and had it not been at the time it was one hour more could have sufficed for the prisoners to make their escape.

R. C. Vroman, a young man of this city, who is serving a sentence for theft of wheat from a railroad car, was the channel through which Sheriff Canning learned of the proposed jall break. The young man was cognizant of what some of the other prisoners were doing, and when his mother alled to see him last evening he was allowed outside to speak to her. As his mother was bidding him goodbye he remarked: "If you see in the papers in the morning anything about the prisoners getting away from the jail here don't think I am with them, as I shall not leave." He told his mother further that the men in the jail would attempt to break out, but that it was more than his life would be worth to tell the jailer. Mrs. Vroman, when she went home, told her husband, and he in turn told a third party, who at once called up Sheriff Canning by telephone. Sheriff Canhing at once made an investigation and found that one of the steel bars separating the corridor on the lower floor in which the prisoners are kept during the daytime had been broken off, leav-ing a space sufficiently large for a man to crawl through, and that one bar over the middle window on the west of the corridor had been sawn through at one end and partly through at the other. A few minutes more work would have been sufficient to have completed the sawing of the bar. It was found that an iron angle bar had been torn from the iron bunks in the cell in the cylinder occupied at night by J. H.

Whitepmb and William Smith, the latter a negro. This and an iron support torn from the sink had been used to break off the steel bar in the corridor. The saw or saws with which the bar of the window was sawed could not be found last night. Your Vroman was taken into the jailer's private apartmen's and there he told the whole story of the attempted jail break. Whitcomb and Smith, he said, were the men who had done the work and they had been at it nearly a week. While Whitcomb was sawing the bar on the window Smith. the negro kept the space made by the breaking of the bar in the corridor hid by placing a basket of coal and a washtub against it. Another prisoner, Frank Vaughan, he said, assisted Whitcomb and

Although the saws could not be found last night, one of the other prisoners admitted to Jailer Gallup that the men had them.

Vroman told also of a previous plan conefected by Whitcomb, Smith and Vaughan to escape. They had arranged a towel so that when Jailer Gallup opened the gate of the corridor to allow coal to be taken in, it could be easily thrown around his peck and then up to the bar. With the jailer thus enught, they intended to put him into one of the cells in the cylinder. take his keys from him, place the members in and then make their escape, after seizmanner of standing when opening the door. One of the principal questions to come before be heard. the meeting is the proposed uniform contract between the canners and jobbers. A meeting was recently held in Des Moines by committees from both sides, but no agreement was reached as to what the contract shall contain. Both the jobbers and canners have submitted drafts of what they respectively consider should be included and these will be discussed and possibly acted upon at the meeting tomorrow. Any contract adopted now will not be of benefit to the jobbers this year, they having placed their orders for this season. Patrons of Cascade-Bellevue Line Object to Poor Service Furnished Them.

Their Population Exceeds Eight Thousand for the First Time-Governor Asked to Address Ment Producers.

(From a Staff Correspondent.) DES MOINES, Feb. 19.-(Special.)-Parons of the Cascade & Bellevue branch of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad have complained to the state railroad commissioners that the only way they can tell when a train is coming is by telephoning to the farm houses along the route. They say they have aided the road by taxes and donations and think the road should give better service. The road is a narrow gauge affair 26% miles long, and the complaint of the mayors and city councils of four of the five towns along the ine is to the effect that as the Milwaukee changes its narrow gauge equipment on some other branch to a standard gauge it dumps the discarded material onto the Cascade & Bellevue line. Among other complaints the petitions to the railroad ommissioners for an investigation state that about two years ago the road abolished its telegraph stations at all but the termi-$4,000 being pledged by Charles Tabor of nal points and that as a result the patrons Denison, providing friends of the institution are not only unable to find out when a train will arrive, but the road is unable to operate more than one train at a time over the entire system. It is furthermore com-plained that the wornout engines can haul but five standard cars at a time, while there are frequently fifteen or twenty cars offered and received. Besides, the stock loaded on the narrow gauge cars has to be reloaded at Bellevue in the standard gauge cars. The road complained of was originally built as the Chicago, Bellevue, Cascade & Western and was incorporated August 4, 1877. It extends from Cascade, Dubuque county, to Bellevue, Jackson county. It is probable the original intention was that it should reach Chicago. It was completed in 1879 and in 1880 was conveyed to the Chicago, Clinton, Dubuque & Minnesota railroad, which in the same year sold it to the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul. Secretary Dwight N. Lewis has forwarded copies of the petitions to President A. J. Earling of the Milwaukee road, and a date will be set when representatives of the road and of the towns along the line will

Vaudeville at the Creighton-Orpheum One of the most satisfactory little comedies ever offered is being presented in most acceptable manner at the Orpheum this week. It tells relief rolls in December, 1896. Mr. Lee a tale of a young couple who are eloping, also had a claim for something over $87 the girl having been forbidden by her slepfor pay due since the time he had been father to marry the man of choice. She has a note from her mother, signed on her deathbed, giving the daughter permission ber of the relief he owed dues since the to wed when she becomes 18. The elopers make their way to the office of a justice of the peace, where the marriage is intertook up the question of the counter claim rupted by the appearance of the step-and decided for the defendant on this father. The action of the play developes the fact that the justice is the father of claim of the company to the same amount | the girl, he having been divorced from the mother when the daughter was a baby. This gives him a right to say when Georgina was 18, and the ceremony goes on. .Mr. Barrows plays the old justice of Malvern, attorney for Mr. Lee, in a letter the peace as he does everything, with good judgment and perfect taste, and makes it a strong character. His support is very good. The little comedy was a decided hit yesterday, with two blg audiences, and ought to go well the rest of the wack. Another interesting sketch is that presented by Harry Earle Godfrey and Miss

There is no doubt but what the jury was instructed in your case to return a verdict for the defendant. This was done on second thought by his honor, Judge Green, Judge Green first announced that he would instruct the jury for you. He had overlooked the defendant's counter claim for contributions that he holds you ought to make. In his ruling he announced that he would allow their counter claim as a setoff only against your claims for henefits, thus recognizing our contention that you were in the relief. I shall at once bring your action against the defendant for the balance due you.

From this understanding it would seem that Mr. Lee had really won his case. Veta Henderson. This is based on the temporary reincarnation of an Egyptian princess who has been dead some thirty centuries. It affords some excellent comedy and is very well done. The Avolos, a quartette, play exceedingly well on the xylophone, and make a decided Impression. Mr. West and Miss Van Sicien have a novel If he is put on the relief rolls he will be idea for a musical sketch, which proved very popular. Harry V. It is novel in detail and conception is most important to the members of the relief and the correct statement of the case and is carried out in a most remarkable way.
