FACTS BROUGHT OUT AT THE INQUEST

Her Home and All Forfelted for Captain Kirkman, She Takes Her Life to Escape Her Sorrow.

"I am the most unhappy woman in the thing I wanted and a good husband, and become famous. I have sacrificed all for the sake of a man, for the sake of Captain Kirkman. Now my husband will not have anything to do with me, and I am the most miserable woman on earth. I am past all redemption. There is no chance of ever being forgiven."

Such was the confession of Mrs. Ber sie Chandler to Lucile Phillips, a maid at the Paxton hotel, an hour before she Knights of Columbus, located at O'Neill, fired the shot that ended her life. The facts developed at the coroner's inquest Omaha Saturday and organized a state Saturday afternoon.

So great was her misery and loneliness broast and sobbed out her story.

Were you ever afraid of anything, Lucile?" she asked as she pulled a shining P. McDevitt, South Omaha. revolver from beneath her pillow and toyed with it. "No, you are not as unhappy as I." Then she placed the weapon back in its hiding place.

After she had composed herself she took from her dresser a piece of paper on which was a poem in a woman's handwriting. It spoke of a darkness for which there was no dawn and a sleep that knows no waking. She read it to the maid and

"Do you know," she said, placing her hands to her temples, "I feel that I am going to be dangerously ill. My head throbs so. If anything happens to me will you take care of the little boy? Oh, how I

At this very time the little fellow was singing and playing in the halls and riding up and down the elevator. And today does not know the truth, but thinks that his mother is too ill to see him. Shortly after this the mald went to pre-bath for Mrs. Chandler, and it was while the water was running in the tub that the fatal shot was fired. The mald rushed in to see the body writhing on the floor, gave the alarm and fainted. On the dresser was found a sealed letter addressed to Lieutenant Chandler, also an envelope in which was a photograph of the little son and a lock of his hair. This was marked, "To go with me." Independent Plant to Be Established on the Industrial Plat Near Sarpy Mills.

Omaha will very likely have a new distiller whose home is in New York has been in the city, staying at the Her Grand, and has an hounced his intention of putting up as into the control of the city in the control of the city is the city in the city in the city is the city in the city in the city is the city in the city in the city is the city in the city in the city in the city is the city in the cit nounced his intention of putting up an independent house on the Sarpy Mills tract recently purchased by P. E. Her for the Omaha, Lincoln & Beatrice Interurban Railway company. Mr. Iler made the statement Friday that he would become a partner in the new enterprise. It is understood all of the preliminary arrangements have been made, except as to the trackage and switching, for which negotiations are how under way.

This will be the first industry to locate on the tract which is intended to be a manufacturing suburb to Omaha. When the interurban road is in, producers there will have outlet by four lines of railroad This wil not give them the large switching facilities offered in Omaha, but the difference in taxes and in the value of the site for the distillery more than offset the slight switching disadvantage. If nothing turns up to put a stop to the proceedings the company will be ready to build as soon as the interurban line is connected up.

The head of this house is at present operating an independent distillery in the east. He explains his movement to the west as a search for cheap corn. In his present location he has to pay so dearly for the raw material that he believes he can make the raw spirits more cheaply here in the corn center, notwithstanding certain disadvantages which he believes exist here. Omaha is an advantageous point for distilling, as shown by the purchase of the Her plant by the trust. The original combination did not include the Omaha house, but it was found that Omaha, by its location, enjoyed certain advantages in western shipments. This made the Omaha plant too important to be over-Mr. Her, having severed his connection with the trust distillery, will enter It again actively, it is understood, in the independent company. Mr. ller, however, declines to discuss the new industry at this time because there is a slight uncertainty as to some of the details.

The location of a second distillery here will be a great boost for the grain market. At present the corn which comes in is wery little used here, but merely handled through the elevators and then shipped east and south. Enough elevators will be built this year to insure large stocks of corn ready for use, and with a few distilleries, mills and similar plants, a strong local demand will be developed.

Mining in this district is comparatively a simple affair. Blanket deopsits of ore from ten to thirty feet in thickness is being found at a depth below the surface of about sixty feet. Preliminary tests as to the presence of ore are made by drilling, which is not expensive. When ore is found with the drill shafts are sunk, by means of which conclusive evidence is found as to the quality and extent of ore present. When satisfactory showings are made modern mills are erected which turn out the ore product ready for the smelter. It is not hard to believe, after investigation, that the owner of a good bed of ore in this district has something surpassing in value even a far-famed Nebraska farm.
