F. V. KNIEST, R. P., "THE DRUG STORE MAN."

Expert Advertiser—most extraordinary. For many, many, many years I have taken up the subject of advertising as applied to drug stores, patent medicines, specialities, etc., and by running everything that has ever been thought, said or written on the subject—or liable to be—through a percolator of gray matter and the test of actual results. I find myself possessed of a plan and method of procedure that bring in the yellow metal so fast you will really be crowded for storage quarters.

When it comes to advertising a drug store, lining it up and getting the rough corners out of the way and a celluliod thish, so to speak. I "am there with the groceries." This may entail the burial of most cherished practices and time-begotten ideas, but the funeral can be conducted without much notice, as there will be plenty of room for all mourners on the head transport. I may have to change the entire personel of your working force from delivery boy to "head bluff," but this, with ample police protection, car be done.

Perhaps you have a medicine or some specialty you are gradually wasting the inheritance of marriage on. You see the blue sky of hope above, but the distance never seems to get smaller. Let me examine your formula—the finished article—the price, wholesale and retail, the use or necessity for such an article: the competition and your system, if any, of exploitation, and any other information of a
