

You'll Admit the Wisdom of This Clearance Movement

When a season is over we have hundreds of designs in Furniture and hundreds of patterns in Carpets and Rugs that are discontinued by the makers and cannot be obtained another season. All such goods in our store are now going at a sacrifice and you'll admit the wisdom of such a movement. Prices are now reduced 25% to 35%—every odd lot and every line that is to be discontinued cut below cost to send the goods flying into the homes of the people—into YOURS. Note today's special—thousands more like them here, but the space is not large enough to mention them all.

GIRL TWICE ATTEMPTS LIFE

Daughter of Rich Bostonian Tries Suicide in Vain.

NOW AT MONADNOCK HOTEL

Defying Father, Marries Ball Player, Comes to Omaha for Divorce, Spends Money, Works as Domestic, Drinks Poison.

Mrs. Bernard Cassidy, wife of a ball player, formerly Miss Lorna Werner, daughter of Dr. J. G. Werner, a prominent Boston dentist, with an office at 172 Commonwealth avenue, a child of culture and refinement, graduate of a girl's seminary at Springfield, Mass., lies in a room of severely simple furnishings at the Monadnock hotel, recovering from two attempts at suicide. She has passed the danger point and is now able to sit up for a few minutes at a time.

The story of this life, just 21 years old, reads like a novel. Told by the young woman herself, it is epitomized thus: Born and reared in a typically refined New England home, with never a want un-supplied, educated in a girl's school, she lost herself in the charms of Bernard Cassidy, an outfielder for Lowell and other New England base ball teams and finally became his wife. In September, 1907, she was deserted by her husband, who had married her father's daughter and lost his prestige as a ball player, the girl was forced to leave him. On her father's advice she came to Omaha to seek a divorce. Her resources gave out and her pride forbade her asking for more money from home, so she sought work as a domestic at the home of Dr. A. D. Laird, 189 Farnam street. She was sent there by the Young Women's Christian association and she worked a week and told her story there. In despair she attempted suicide and fate triumphed twice in her favor.

Will Not Try It Again.
"I will not try it again," said the pretty girl, with a smile curling her lips, parched by the deadly drug.

"Will I go back east when I get up?" she asked in response to an inquiry. "Certainly not. I will stay right here. Mrs. Baxter (proprietress of the Monadnock) has been good to me and I like the west."

Mrs. Cassidy was at the Midland hotel on North Sixteenth street when she took the first poison. That was Monday night. She drank some laudanum. It strangled her and was emitted before getting into the stomach. She tried again, but either her nerve or the poison again failed. Dr. Fitzgibbon, police surgeon, was called and treated her. The matter was kept perfectly quiet.

"At the request of the Midland hotel people I left there and came here to the Monadnock, where I had three days before," said the young woman. "I was half dead, but Mrs. Baxter took me in and has been as kind to me as she could be. I wrote to papa when I took the poison, telling him everything. He has been a good father, much better than I have been a daughter. But I have not been so very wicked."

Becomes an Ardent Fan.
"You see, I became an ardent fan, oh, so wild. I would rather go to see a game of ball than do most anything else. And then I met Bernard."

"No Bernard will not bother me here. He will only die laughing when he learns what I have done. Now will papa come out, now that he knows I am alive, but I am looking for some financial assistance from him. He sent me $15, which I got yesterday. You think that's strange, since he is a rich man? Well, I thought I was in big luck to get that much from him. He refused to send me more."

Mrs. Cassidy's throat is burned inside and out from the poison. So are her lips. She scarcely speaks above a whisper, but is in jovial spirits. She is a beautiful girl of pronounced brunette type and has the typical Bostonian accent and the evidence of education and culture in every word.

HOLMES IS FOUND GUILTY

Young Lawyer Convicted of Embezzling Funds Collected for a Client.

Disregarding his insanity plea, the jury in district criminal court found William H. Holmes guilty of embezzling $647 belonging to Joseph Schwenk, his client. Coupled with the verdict was a recommendation of leniency.

The jury went out at 11:40 a. m. and the verdict was received at 2 p. m., after the jurors had returned from dinner. It is understood the first ballot stood 10 to 2 for conviction and only three ballots were required.

Holmes is a young lawyer who had practiced in Omaha for four years with bright prospects. He is a graduate of the legal department of the University of Iowa and of Yale. In the winter of 1907 he began to dissipate and became involved in a number of questionable transactions. In March he fled to Ogden, where he took an assumed name and lived until June, when he was discovered and brought back to Omaha.

He admitted appropriating the money, but pleaded insanity. In support of his plea he introduced evidence showing his grandmother, his uncle and his father had all been in an asylum at Augusta, Me., and his uncle and father had died there. A number of associates testified that he had acted peculiarly both before and after his arrest. Others with whom he had worked declared on the witness stand he was perfectly sane.

In his closing argument, County Attorney English ridiculed the insanity plea, saying to entertain it seriously would be a reflection on his and the jury's intelligence.

Judge Sears instructed the jury if it found Holmes sane enough to distinguish between right and wrong he was not insane.

Tailor Held as Incendiary.
JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Feb. 28.—Charged with having started a fire in Burnside, near here, last week, which caused $100,000 damage and burned a woman to death, Leroy Adamson, a tailor, who occupied one of the burned buildings, was arrested today. It is alleged he started the fire in order to collect insurance.

FUND FOR PARKS, NOT PAVING

Regular Money Cannot Be Used for Boulevards, Board Holds.

ASKS FOR ACTION AT ELECTION

If Bond Issue is Not Carried at Polls Improvement Work, Members Say, Cannot Be Carried Out.

Construing the provisions of the city charter to mean that the regular funds of the Park board are to be used exclusively for the improvement of parks and not for paving streets and boulevards abutting the Park board at its meeting Friday morning recommended to the mayor and city council that at the coming spring election the matter of voting bonds for paving streets abutting parks be acted upon.

The city charter grants the board the right of issuing bonds in the sum of $50,000

for this purpose, providing the proposition carries at the polls. The issuance of these bonds was voted upon by the people last fall, but was lost, due in the opinion of E. J. Cornish, member of the board, to their not understanding what the funds were to be used for.

On account of there being plenty of money in the county road fund, due to the paying in of the inheritance tax, no road fund levy will be made this year, thereby cutting down the funds of the Park board. But under legislative provision it cannot touch the inheritance tax which is held now to be for the exclusive use of country roads, though the money was paid in from estates left by residents of the city.

The charter provides that when improvements are to be made upon streets or sidewalks adjacent to parks and parkways the cost shall be paid out of a special fund to be raised by the voting of bonds. The sum so raised shall not be used for purchasing additional lands for parks.

If the matter is not voted on, or in case the proposition should be lost at the polls board members state that contemplated work of improvement will have to be cut down. The gift of additional lands for Bluff View park by W. I. Kierstead was accepted with thanks by the board, subject to ratification by the council. Two years ago Mr. Kierstead gave an acre of ground on Florence boulevard, north of Ames avenue, for a park. He now adds a tract 23x125 feet to it.

TWO RUNAWAYS. ONE SERIOUS

Driver Gets Broken Leg, Horses Are Hurt and Woman Becomes a Heroine.

Two runaways netted a broken leg for the driver of a coal wagon, serious injuries to his horses, an unidentified woman as heroine, and the miraculous escape from injury of B. Jetter, the South Omaha brewer, and two other men in a carriage in the middle of the day Friday.

John Lanihan, 201 Mason street, had his right leg broken by being thrown from his wagon during a runaway in front of the Roffie hotel, Sixteenth street, at 1:15 Friday afternoon. He was driving a spirited team with a heavily loaded wagon of coal slack for the P. C. Havens company, the team sent at an automobile at Sixteenth and Jones streets and ran away, the neck yoke falling down. Lanihan lost control of the team and he was thrown out in front of the Roffie hotel. The team kept on to Howard street and turned east and ran into the curb in front of the Sunderland block. Here the heavy wagon was overturned and both of the horses were so badly hurt that one of them, at least, will have to be killed.

Lanihan was picked up from the street and carried into the saloon next north of the Roffie hotel and taken to the Omaha General hospital in the police ambulance. Both bones of his right leg just above the ankle were broken squarely in two. One of the first persons coming to his rescue was a woman. She rendered every assistance she could, and then seeing men coming to take care of the injured man she fainted. She was a complete stranger to Lanihan.

Little short of a miracle saved Mr. Jetter and his friends from serious injury at Twentieth and Farnam streets, when a closed carriage belonging to G. W. Mosher of South Omaha was completely upset and smashed at the corner of John Irwin, the driver, nor the others suffered the slightest injury.

The carriage was returning from Forest Lawn cemetery and coming down Twentieth street past the Omaha club, the horses became unmanageable and got beyond the control of the driver. They ran across the sidewalk on the south side of Farnam and hit a street car pole, smashing the carriage, turning it over and breaking the glass. From the wreck came the two occupants and the driver none the worse for the shakedown.
