Auto Accident Arouses People to Take Action

Injuries Received By Paul J. Klein lein Back of Complaint Agrainst Speed Maniacs.

The case of Paul J. Kleinlein, electrician bile, has aroused the people of the western part of the city. The occupants of the automobile, which after knocking Kleinlein down, passed over his body failed to stop, but instead put on full speed and hastened across the bridge to Omaha,

Complaint has been made to the author ties and request made that some steps of the speed ordinance on West Broadway. Last summer several accidents were reported and for a time the city authorities had West Broadway patroled by an officer day and night. The residents of that section of the city threaten to take the law into their hands as they did for a while last summer when several automobile parties were made targets for missiles of various kinds. On one eccasion a well known society woman who was in a car which was greeted with a fusillade from a crowd of youngsters, was struck between the eyes with an overripe tomato which had sojourned for a considerable time in a garbage can. The trouble with this practice is that the innocent oft times suffer for the guilty.

The authorities have the matter unde consideration and it is likely that the police patrol service on West Broadway will

The Boss of the Establishment

He Decides That a Square Meal in the City is a Paying Investment.

CARE

BY AMERE MAN. The Boss of the Establishment had come home early to get ready for the garden patry and barn dance, a function to be held during the afternoon and evening at the country home of his wife's brother. Originally the Boss had displayed a certain lukewarmness toward the contemplated, excursion into suburban society, but, spurred by the calculated opposition of his spouse, he had ended with a peremptory declaration that they must accept the invitation at all costs.

During the week, however, the Boss' ourage for the undertaking had waned appreciably, and now as he dressed he glanced every little while out of the window, finally remarking hopefully;

"I think it's going to rain." "The wish is father to the thought, I magine," answered the wife, "Father and mother and the wholefamily." confessed the Boss candidly. And then he added with increased optimism, "Of course they won't expect us if it

The Boss' wife turned sharply from the mirror at which she was making herself beautiful and charming:

"Now look here!" she exclaimed, "there's Shows Big Yield no use trying to wriggle out of this engagement! You know I didn't want to go and that you made me accept! But that't always the way! You're a grand promiser when something you don't want to do is a few days' off, but when the time comes you refuse to go and throw all the responsibility upon me!" It will be observed that the Boss' wife was not in a mood which, by any stretch County Auditor Innes has just completed of the imagination, could be termed ador-"Who said anything about not going" the Boss blustered indignantly. "But un-ready in fifteen minutes we'll miss train, and if we do we'll not go!" "That seems to be a self-evident proposition," she retorted icily, Bad humor in the Boss' wife was always the formula that he had been taught.

marked by an extraordinary precision disappointment, they caught the train. ness observed: "My! But this country air of usefulness. gives one an appetite! I'm starved already. I suppose, though, all I'll get to Boss' wilted and weary Wife, eat is a cup of tea and a ladyfinger!" There's to be a regular dinner out of for myself."

Reaching the piazza, they were greeted real dinner," suggested the lady as, with by a half grown boy servant employed to sigh of relief, she lifted the last strawmilk the cows during the week, but now resplendent in white duck and new yellow

"Your name, please," commanded the transformed functionary, as the Boss and his wife mounted the steps.

Many and many a half dollar had found no previous acquaintance to interfere with for my comfort."

Smilingly the Boss vouchsafed the desired information, and in a stentorian roar the youth announced-to adjacent trees and shrubs-"Mr. and Mrs. Mann." The Boss looked bewildered. Apparently in response to the question in his eyes the haughty minion, who had reached the end of his lesson, like so many other functionaries, took to improvisation and was lost.

"De hull bunch is up at de barn," he And at the barn they found the whole garden party and bern dance,

The Boss had not long to enjoy his bucolic surroundings, for almost immediately he was summoned by the hostess to mix, the cocktalls and make punch for the hundred guests.

And for one solid hour, in a niche off the kitchen, where it was only too evident the cook and waitress and butler had already sampled the ingredients laid out for him, he gave an imitation of a Broadway bartender on a Saturday night.

More and more guests arrived. More and speech and deportment. Nevertheless, she more cocktails were called for.
