Solid as Everlasting Granite.

Omaha's banking institutions make a showing in response to the call for a statement from the Comptroller of the Currency that must be most gratifying to their managers. While the totals are not so high in millions as were those submitted a few months ago, the decrease is due solely to expanding business. The money that was held on deposit here is out and at work again. The decrease in deposits is counterbalanced by the increase in loans, proving that the money has gone to work. The fact that deposits still exceed loans and discounts by more than $16,000,000 is an indication of the healthy condition of the local institutions. Money on hand is sufficient to care for the ordinary demands of business and leave a surplus for meeting any extraordinary occasion that may arise unexpectedly.

This has long been the keynote of the banking business in Omaha. The men who direct the affairs of the great institutions proceed always along safe and conservative lines. No Omaha bank has ever been caught supporting a "wild cat" movement of any sort. The managers have confined their efforts to the fostering and promotion of legitimate business enterprises, and have taken care of their customers in a manner that has proven the wisdom of their course. Omaha has been remarkably free from the difficulties that follow in the wake of unsafe banking for this reason. The bankers are progressive, and ever ready to extend help to new firms or enterprises, but such a thing as "the gambler's chance" is unknown in local financial circles. The addition of two national banks to the local group during the last year is but an evidence of the growth of the city's commercial and industrial interests. The names of the men who are intrusted with the banking business of Omaha, as disclosed by the published reports and advertisements, are such as inspire confidence, and give weight to the assertion that the local banks are as solid as the everlasting granite.
