Mayor Joins in Singers' Parade

Receives Share of Ovation Planned for Milwaukee and Chicago Crowd.

Would-be Congressman Stocker was instrumental in arranging a little scheme to receive the attention of the city. Mayor Dahlman, coming from the west, was on a train an hour late, and as a result the Chicago and Milwaukee delegations to the Saengerfest arrived at the same time as the mayor. The visiting delegations had hands along, and it was an easy matter to have the Dahlman reception committee, in gaily decorated automobiles, fall in behind the German marchers. So Mayor "Jim" and his cohorts get the benefit of the crowds that lined the streets to see the parade of the Chicago and Milwaukee delegations. The mayor's return home was a gala affair.

COMES FROM THE FARM TO BATTLE WITH W. J. BRYAN

"Bill" Dech Says He Differs from the Commander More Than Ever Before. "Bill" Dech, of Ithaca, Saunders county, after sixteen years of quietude and silence, has taken the warpath again. "And I'm in for blood this time," says the old middle-aged road populist, who was ever and always opposed to fusion. "Today I differ more radically with Mr. Bryan than I ever did with any public man. I know him through and through, from his first to the present moment, and at Grand Island I intend to have my say in a way that will leave no one in doubt as to my attitude." As in the days when populism was militant in Nebraska, the old war horse of the cause is still vigorous and vehement in his convictions. Though 70 years of age, he doesn't look to be more than 50, and if the days of his youth don't learn his real name in the populist convention at Grand Island, it will be because "Bill" Dech cannot talk. In other years Dech served in the house and senate as a populist, and was one of the men claiming the lieutenant governorship, around whom a fierce fight waged. He announces openly that he has come out of his retirement on the farm at this time to combat the newest pet issue of Bryan with all the vigor he can throw into the fight.

Curtiss Wires that He Comes Friday with Veteran.

GRANDSTAND IS NOW COMPLETED

Aeroplanes Are Here and Ready to Take to the Grounds at Forty-Fifth and Great Streets.

Glenn H. Curtiss, star performer for the Mid-West Aviation meet, will arrive in Omaha Friday night of this week. J. C. Mars is on his way, and a new third man, John D. McCurdy, will come with Curtiss. A telegram to this effect was received by Clark Powell Wednesday. McCurdy, the aviator added to those expected for the Omaha exhibition, has been associated with Curtiss and with Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, in airplane experiments that were carried on at Hammondsport, N. Y., in the winter and spring of 1907 and 1908. He comes here from Bradock, Nova Scotia, and he has been sailing the "Silver Dart" at a number of Canadian meetings. The aeroplanes that are to come from Atlantic City and Kansas City have arrived and are to be set up at the grounds Wednesday. Two specially trained mechanics Lynn Sawyer and Cy Ammann, in the employ of Curtiss have come to take charge of the machines and to see that they are properly housed and cared for.

Solicit Money Which They Say is for Campaign

Armed with Letter from Mayor Dahlman, Two Men Collect Considerable Amount.

Armed with a letter from Mayor Dahlman in which the mayor declared himself a personal friend of the bearer and thanked him for any favor that might be done him, C. E. Glikson, secretary of the South Omaha Labor Gazette, has collected, according to the police department, several hundred dollars in tributes from the women of the third ward, alleging that the letter was given him for the purpose of collecting campaign funds. Glikson was arrested Wednesday and will be held awaiting the mayor's disposal. Cornelius H. Van Wie of 824 North Twenty-first street, South Omaha, editor of the Labor Gazette, had a similar letter and is accused by the chief of police of having used it for the same purpose. He has not been arrested. The letter which Mr. Glikson had was: June 23, 1910. To Whom It May Concern: The bearer, Mr. C. E. Glikson, secretary of the Labor Gazette, is personally known to me and the policy pursued by his publication on the labor question expresses my sentiments. Mr. Glikson and his associates are desirous of creating a fund for the purpose of purchasing and operating their own printing plant, thus reducing the cost of production of their publication. They are favorable to my candidacy for governor and any courtesy or assistance extended will be personally appreciated by yours truly. JAMES C. DAHLMAN, Mayor. "I gave them the letter," said Mayor Dahlman on his return to the city Wednesday morning, "because they needed assistance in building up their paper," and as they were friends of mine I thought the letter might help them. As far as collecting money for campaign purposes is concerned they never had my consent for anything like that." Glikson was not brought up in police court Wednesday morning, as the city prosecutor refused to file a complaint against him until the matter could be discussed with the mayor. H. B. Pehrsky who acted as attorney for Glikson, threatened to bring habeas corpus proceedings unless his client was released on bond. Police Judge Crawford was not given an opportunity to fix the bond, as Glikson was not brought before him.

Newsboys Have Their Outing

Parade the Streets of Omaha and Then Start for Manawa for Picnic. Waving their flags and marching in time to a brass band the 300 newsboys of Omaha and South Omaha marched through the streets Wednesday morning and left for Manawa to celebrate their annual picnic. A long exhibit program with fifty or more first prizes, the free use of most of the amusement concessions at Manawa park, swimming, and a big dinner were the main events of the day's program. The prizes were donated by Omaha business men, the amusement tickets by Manager Byrne of the park and twenty Omaha masters and young women went with the boys to help them enjoy themselves and to serve the dinner. The menu is a glorious one from a small boy's standpoint, including 200 fried chickens, gallons upon gallons of ice cream and melons, fruit, crackerjack and other delights in plenty.

RANCHMAN BOOSTS THE BIG SHORT GRASS COUNTRY

Says that the Foothills in Western Nebraska Are Ideal for Cattle Raising. C. B. Christensen of Holt county was in South Omaha yesterday with the object of looking over the market conditions. He is a large land owner in Iowa as well as Nebraska and is at present stocking up the Nebraska ranch in Holt county. He is located about twenty miles south of O'Neill in the section where the upper waters of the Elkhorn spread out like a fan and make one of the finest hay and grain countries in the world. He says his plan is to breed the cattle on his Nebraska farm and ship them to his Iowa farm to finish. At the latter place they will be near the market and in the midst of the best corn section of the country. By this means he hopes to economize on the output by using the cheaper Nebraska grass and pasture land. He said, "This plan was not new with me, but it has been done by several of my neighbors in Iowa and has worked well. I like Nebraska for grazing. For cattle breeding it is the finest state I ever saw. The spring water in Holt county flows right out of the ground. We have our pastures in the valleys between the sand hills where never finer grass grew. The sand hills are not much good, as a rule, but that is by no means the wilderness it was supposed to be several years ago."

NEW UNIVERSITY BUILDING

Contract Let for First New Structure for University of Omaha.

TO BE A MODEL GYMNASIUM

Increased Enrollment Expected When the Fall Semester Begins on September 1—Excellent Prospects for School.

The University of Omaha has let the contract for its first new building and operations began on it Wednesday. It is a gymnasium building and will be erected on the university site—the old John L. Redick homestead on North Twenty-fourth street—where the large dwelling house forms the original building and has been highly adapted to class room work. The gymnasium will cover a ground space of 80x100 feet and will cost from $15,000 to $20,000. The basement will be of stone and the superstructure of fine pressed brick. The basement will contain the baths and above there will be a running track, balcony and all the equipment that goes with a first-class modern gymnasium. As the university's student roll will be materially enlarged by the beginning of the second year, September 1, the intention is to have this gymnasium completed by the opening of the fall term and give the young men and women access to physical culture as well as intellectual. Dr. D. E. Jenkins, acting president of the university, and Judge Howard Kennedy, president of the board of trustees, say the new institution has the most excellent prospects for a good year and successful future. "We made such a good start last year that we have had no difficulty in impressing men of big business affairs with the serious importance and the bright future of this university and we have really been somewhat surprised ourselves at the responsive energy with which we have met from our friends."

Police Herd In Many Offenders

In the aggregate seventy-six arrests were made. One of the features of the day's turmoil was a raid made by Sergeant Madsen and Officers Ring, Murphy, Wilson and Woods, 1200-12th street, where a crowd of thirty-two was gathered in. Out of this bunch thirteen were women. Various minor charges were included in the complaints.

NEWSPAPER REPORTER TURNS SLEUTH CAPTURES VICTIMS

Calls Police Attention to Pair of Pickpockets and Helps Run Them Down. H. Harris and George Hartman, two light fingered men who were attempting to work the crowds at the Rome hotel Tuesday evening, were arrested after an exciting chase down the alley, in which shots were fired and general excitement prevailed. Kenneth Cameron, a reporter for a local newspaper, noticed the two men in the hotel, and knowing the reputation of one, followed them for nearly a half hour. He notified the police and the hotel management, and the two men were shadowed until the detectives arrived. Nothing was found on their persons when they were arrested, but a bell boy who had been detailed to watch them, located a pocket book which had been stolen and then hidden by the men. H. Harris, while being taken to the street, by a quick jerk, succeeded in breaking away, and made an attempt to escape by running down the alley between the Her Grand and the Home hotels. He was followed by Cameron and Officer Ferris, and after several shots were fired, he was captured. Captain Mostyn, George Heil and Officer Ferris were the officers on the case. George Hartman was arrested some time ago for a small offense, and he is not being held but a short time. He is usually tall and thin, while his pal is short and heavy.

FAILURE IN ALL AGES

Lessons Gleaned from the History of Prohibition in Ancient and Modern Times

Fourth Article.

To the Editor of The Bee—In my last communications I have argued against prohibition as wrong in principle and practice. Let me now warn the incautious reader against confounding prohibition with total abstinence. Prohibition is a matter of state policy; total abstinence is a matter of private practice. It is perfectly consistent for a man to be a total abstainer and an anti-prohibitionist. It is equally consistent for a drinker to favor prohibition. Total abstinence is as old as Zoroaster, or the Kenite founder of the Rechabites. Thus it reaches back almost to Solomon and, perhaps, to the date of Abraham. But who was the author of prohibition? It was a man who, in some respects, was the greatest man that has lived in 2,000 years, Abul-Kasem-Idn-Abdallah, better known as the Arabian prophet, Mohammed. He lived, as you all know, in the seventh century of Christ. Mohammed thus enforces his iron law: "If a drop of wine fall in a well; if the well be filled up; if grass grow above it; if a sheep eat of that grass, then shall my followers not eat that meat." When Mohammed's successor, Kalif Omah, took Jerusalem, A. D. 637, and then there enforced the first prohibitory law in a Christian country, Sopronius, the Christian patriarch, exclaimed: "This is of truth the abomination of desolation spoken of by Daniel, the prophet, standing in the holy place." The Moors conquered Spain with the aid of Count Julian, the Greek, and held it for seven centuries. They punished any person found vending wine by pouring molten lead down his throat. This may be commended by some extremists, but let us see what is the final outcome of such a policy. The Parais, Mohammedans and Brahmans made up the dominant forces in India prior to Clive's conquest. Though, like Caesar's Gauls, they differed among themselves in respect to customs, institutions and laws, they all agreed in regarding the use of liquor. England brought Bibles and beer. But let us look back, and see the effect of liquor abstinence in India. The fact is that man craves a nerve food; whether he really needs it or not, I do not presume to determine. But he craves it, and will have it, either as alcohol, nicotine, morphine, or what-not. In India they have 1,000,000 acres devoted to the raising of poppies for opium. They chew betel, a narcotic stimulant, and the result is the lead of one of many species of pepper. These leaves are plucked green and spread over with chaman, or moltened quick lime obtained from calcined shells, and wrapped about scrapings of the aacca nut, known as piping. This abominable concoction is put into the mouth and chewed. Men and women chew this stuff from morning to night. In fact, it is now a matter of etiquette, as is the snuff box in Europe. It gives the saliva the color of blood, the lips are blackened and the teeth are destroyed by its continued use, so that young men of 25 are often toothless. Hashish, the intoxicating extract of hemp, is used in India by those who can afford the luxury. Anyone who has read Dumas' Monte Cristo knows the effect of Hashish. The book is fiction, but the picture is real. The East Indians smoke the strongest tobacco and drink the strongest tea. The same is true of other countries, where enforced abstinence from liquor has prevailed. For seven centuries the Moors enforced prohibition in Spain, until the sale of morphine, cocaine, etc. at drug stores increased with each year. One of the strongest total abstainers in this state smokes regularly fifteen cigars a day—a dry drunk. I know another total abstainer who drinks eighteen cups of coffee a day. Prohibition swamps the drunkard for the dope fiend. How do you like the exchange? WILBUR F. BRYANT.
