

DISCIPLINE FOE TO ACCIDENTS

Former Omaha Man Recounts Incidents to Prove Assertion.

HUMAN IS NOT INFALLIBLE

But that Discipline is Foe to it is Shown by Two Specific Instances Which Are Cited.

"Discipline is the foe of fallibility in the human." These words form the text of an instructive article in the Cleveland Plain Dealer written by Peter West Shelby, a former resident of Omaha...

On the 27th of February, 1901, in the darkness of night the good ship Queen speeding through a storm from San Francisco to Seattle was discovered to be on fire...

They were not long in reeling out the hose and manning the nozzles. The whole after end of the superstructure of the ship was on fire. The men fought the flames as only those struggling for life can contend...

Songs that Cheer. Meanwhile, the people in the lifeboats became excited and one craft was capsized; after a brief, silent struggle in the vortex of the waves, nine went down to the bottom...

The fire was extinguished after a struggle of four hours. The hull of the ship was uninjured and the vital machinery was also uninjured...

The Joy of Safety. Very few people can comprehend the passengers after they had re-embarked. No one but those who have escaped the knee-weakening and sickening sensation of an earthquake...

In due time the Queen limped into the harbor of Seattle. The passengers declared those two girls heroines of the fire, water and storm. The captain's bravery and intelligence were suitably rewarded...

The success of Captain Cousins, his crew and the passengers, in saving the Queen, was the wonder and admiration of the time of all the people on the Pacific coast. I verily believe it was due to one word: "Discipline."

An Atlantic Incident. In the month of August, 1881, I was crossing the Atlantic on La Bourgoyne from France to New York. A great hurricane overtook the ship in mid-ocean...

From childhood I was distressed and humiliated by an unwelcome growth of hair on my face and arms. I tried all the depilatories, powders, creams and other tub-ou preparations I ever heard of, only to make it worse...

This simple remedy enabled me permanently to remove all traces of unwanted hair, and forever end all embarrassment. It is simple, safe and sure and can be used privately at home...

Special Endorsement. As the method above referred to has been endorsed by doctors, true specialists and other tub-ou practitioners, we advise housewives thus afflicted, to take advantage of Mrs. Depo's offer and write her at above address.

accidents on the railroads were due to defective materials, broken rails, etc. The chemist and metallurgist have eliminated nearly all of these causes and now it is the fallibility of the human mind that causes nine-tenths of the accidents...

When I returned to railroading after the civil war I honestly thought that a man who would make a mistake, causing the loss of life, ought to be shot. Mexico adopted the Napoleonic code after it broke loose from the yoke of Spain. That code provides that a man, who kills another accidentally is treated just as same as though he killed him intentionally...

Self-preservation is the basis of all natural law—the first law of nature—and since every man has a duty to preserve his own life, it necessarily follows that he has a strict right to all the means conducive to this end.

Any man who transgresses against the speed laws falls in his duty to his fellow man by disregarding the latter's rights. Hence it follows that the airbrake of the law should be applied to such individuals.

At the Base of Safety. About twenty-four years ago I was appointed general manager of the Montana Central railroad, now part of the Great Northern. My headquarters were in Helena. The road was new and ran through a mountainous country...

These remarks caused me a great deal of serious thought. He felt the importance and that is just what is required of all men in the position of safety to lives. Men like Moriarty never forget their duty.

The young man gazed for a clove and tried not to blink. "And now," she pursued, "I find that you are actually a temperance worker. Now I see you are trying to be modest and deny it, but you can never fool me again."

LEAGUES OF GERMAN FARMERS

Two Million Agriculturists Organized in Two Bodies for Mutual Benefit.

More than 2,000,000 farmers in Germany have organized for mutual benefit and protection such an organization. If it existed in the United States, and were directly political, would hold the balance of power. The German farmers are in two great leagues known as the Imperial Agricultural Union...

The Imperial Agricultural Union has sixty-seven district unions, made up of 18,333 local societies, with a total membership of 1,512,000. It has $75,000,000 in assets. The local societies are divided as follows: Twelve thousand five hundred and eighty-four savings and loan, 118 co-operative societies, 1,390 dairymen and 1,331 miscellaneous. The Imperial last year sold $48,000,000 in dairy products, and paid $38,000,000 for milk. Some of the groups in the Imperial exclusively buy and sell spirits distilled mostly from potatoes...

The second great farmers' alliance is the General Agricultural Union, which has 5,712 local societies, with a total membership of 465,819. It has $11,000,000 in assets. Nearly 4,400 of the locals in the General are savings and loan groups. The average capital of an individual member is $2,500. The functions of these two great organizations are much broader than collective bargaining. In each division there are scientific experts who visit the farms of the members and advise with them concerning crops, live stock, soil, woodland, examining and suggesting remedies, etc. There are laboratories for testing the soil for members.

A third great national body of German farmers is known as the Co-operative Purchasing Society. It has twenty-seven district unions, 1,088 local societies and 216,474 members. It buys fertilizers, feedstuffs, seeds, coal and agricultural machinery. The annual average purchase by each farmer was $104. The Co-operative has a working capital of $10,700,000.

Outside of these three national farmers' organizations there are local dairyman societies scattered all through the empire—1,800 in all, with an aggregate membership of 178,000 and a total assets of $15,000,000. There is a fourth national agricultural body—the Deutsche Landwirtschaft—an important society for the technical advancement of agriculture. There is in Germany only one political organization of farmers. It is called the Bund der Landwirte.

WAR ON LOAN COMPANIES

Nationwide Plan of Campaign Instigated by the Sage Foundation.

Arthur H. Ham, special agent of the Sage foundation, who has charge of the campaign against unscrupulous loan companies, started in New York last week, has entered into negotiations with boards of trade in almost every large city in the country, and has received pledges of support from all sections. It is planned to put the projected reform into operation in all parts of the country at the same time.

What Mr. Ham considers a most important victory was won when he secured from the managers of all the large department stores, who are members of the Retail Dry Goods association, pledges that they will discontinue the practice of dismissing those employees found to be in the grip of the loan sharks.

An eminent German economist says the significance of agricultural unions in Germany lies in their successful advocacy of honest business dealing, in their insistence on each payment and on economy in operating expenses, in their struggle against usury and deception in the business and moral training which they give to the middle and lower classes, and in the happy combination of progressive principles and brotherly feeling which they stimulate.

corn out to be meritorious. Several large employers promised to take up the matter of starting co-operative loan associations so that those temporarily in trouble may be helped at a fair rate of interest and reasonable conditions of repayment. The employers participating in the agreement have on their payrolls over 50,000 employees.

There are 125 loan companies in New York that advertise steadily, he said, and about 200 that do not advertise. They are capitalized at an average of $10,000 each, turning over their $200,000 capital about ten times a year at 15 per cent a month, thus making their gross annual business $30,000,000.

The model loan companies it is proposed to start in this city and elsewhere will limit the dividends to 5 per cent on money invested and will loan money at that rate plus enough to cover the cost of office maintenance. Twenty-five such companies are now established in different sections of the country.—New York Times.

Prescription for Bad Breath and Chronic Indigestion

Bad breath is one of many disagreeable and distressing afflictions that come with indigestion. Below is given the formula for the treatment that is producing such remarkable results in hospital work for stomach trouble. It is said to relieve almost immediately sour stomach, belching, flatulence, and if used for sufficient time will cure the worst dyspepsia. Two ounces essence of Peppermint, three ounces syrup of Ginger, one ounce Catarrh Compound. Mix and take one to two teaspoonful after each meal and at bed time. Catarrh Compound comes put up in ounce sealed packages. Any druggist should have it in stock by this time or he will quickly get it from his wholesale house. For best results mix the Peppermint and the Ginger, then let stand about an hour before adding the Catarrh. It will be more convenient to get the ingredients from the druggist and mix them at home. Persons suffering from stomach trouble should get this without delay.—Adv.
