

CITY HAS NEW REVENUES

Large Sums Are Collected Since Passing Occupation Tax Law.

ROYALTIES SWELL THE FUND

All Jobs to Make Quite a Sum Collected Each Year—Some Are Delinquent in Payment of Their Share.

Since the occupation tax act became effective September 1, 1906, in Omaha, the city exchequer has been enriched in the sum of $147,628.27, according to a statement made public by the comptroller's office Saturday morning.

Besides, there is an amount of $2,352.22 which remains unpaid. The delinquents are the Independent Telephone company and the New State Telephone company, a subsidiary company of the Independent Telephone company. Both make their statements promptly, but so far have failed to pay any occupation tax.

Of the amount, the street railway company is the heaviest contributor. Its payments for occupation taxes amount to $7,223.74. The Nebraska Telephone company is next on the list with a tax of $28,208.64, while the Omaha Gas company comes third by paying $26,699.13. The Omaha Electric Light and Power company gets fourth place by paying $24,778.67.

In the matter of royalties paid for the year 1910, the Omaha gas company paid in $3,882.19, which represents a cent on each 1,000 cubic feet of gas sold during the year. The electric light company comes in with $18,182.85, which is 3 per cent of the gross receipts of the company for the year, less the amount sold to the city.

From subway and area taxes, the sum of $2,022.56 has been paid into the city treasury. Deficits of $25 exist, the delinquents being the Board of Trade building $25; William A. Maurer, $5; Fred J. Vogel, Jr., $15; City National Bank building, $5, and the Charles Dewey estate, $20.

The Brandeis companies head the list by paying $1,511.90. Hayden Brothers paid $29.04, and the John Deere Plow company, $197.72.

McKeen Motor Car Company Doubles Its Omaha Plant

Union Pacific Has Completed Four New Buildings and Fifth is Nearly Complete.

In view of the many orders for McKeen motor cars being received in Omaha by that company, extensive additions to the Omaha shops are being planned by W. R. McKeen, president of the company. The additions will be made at the shop grounds near the Union Pacific shops, and will make the efficiency of the Omaha company almost double what it was six months ago. Just recently the company purchased $50,000 worth of new machinery to be used in building the McKeen car, and built a new building to accommodate the machinery. When the new Union Pacific mill building is finished, the old one is to be utilized by the McKeen company in enlarging its plant.

Orders for nine cars were received at the shops lately. The Ann Arbor road of Michigan will take four of the cars and the Oregon Short Line, a part of the Harriman system, will have five placed on its lines. The cars ordered are of the seventy-foot type, twenty feet larger than the first model built here.

Work has been finished on four of the five shop buildings being erected in Omaha by the Union Pacific. The total cost of the five buildings erected will amount to over $25,000, but the officials of the road consider that the increased amount of work per day made possible by these structures will soon pay for the investment. The five buildings added are as follows: Millwork shop, addition to roundhouse, tool house, paint shop and a pony sawmill. As a part of the mill, the railroad is putting up two big waterproof storage lumber sheds.

The construction of the shops began last season, and now all are completed except the mill building. This has the side walls up and the roof beams placed, but there is another month's work before it is ready for occupancy. The roundhouse addition, which was the building most needed by the Omaha shops, was completed first, although one of the larger structures. It contains stalls for twelve more engines.

County Dads Would Move the Poor Farm

Thinks the Almshouse and the Hospital Should Be Separated—New Interiors.

In the report of the advisory committee of the medical staff of the county hospital, filed before the county commissioners Saturday, important recommendations are made. It is recommended that the almshouse and hospital be placed under separate managements and that the poor farm be removed from the city, as the present system of union results in nothing but hardship for both.

In addition to the regular house physician at least two internes are asked for, these to receive no remuneration other than board and laundry. The report continues: "We think appointments on the medical staff should be made only in the order that vacancies occur, otherwise all harmony will be lost. Names coming before the county commissioners seeking appointment should be submitted to the advisory committee before final action is taken."

The following men are recommended to fill vacancies which now exist: Ernest Keller, J. M. Ford, R. Hix and G. A. Young.

The report, signed by H. B. Lemere and F. E. Coulter, was referred to the proper committee.

Record Class Enters Omaha High School

Two Hundred and Thirty-Eight Report to Principal Graff Saturday.

The largest class that has ever entered the Omaha high school after the midwinter examinations will take up the work in the high school Monday morning. Two hundred and thirty-eight reported to Principal E. U. Graff Saturday morning and registered.

As others are expected when school opens Monday morning, it is expected that a record will be set which will stand for some time. Larger classes have entered at the beginning of school, but never has there been such a registration for the midwinter class.

The students are from the various ward schools, having been graduated in the Class B division.

Last Days January Sale--Monday and Tuesday

"See what a beautiful castle! What a sum it cost! My money is not spent in choice of foreign viands. For horses and equipages I spend not a mite! My house is my ornament; my house my best costume; therefore, my treasury and coffer are open, and what my house needs I hasten to buy." This exclamation of a wealthy French merchant in the closing days of the Renaissance indicates the feeling toward furniture in the time of Louis XIII and his immediate successors. From the models of the Renaissance many productions have been made, for as Paris has always been eagerly copied in styles of dress by this country so has the Gay Capital been drawn upon by designers for furnishing and beautifying our homes. Among these adopted patterns one may see an exact reproduction of the chairs in which Louis XIII and Cardinal Richelieu sat while the shrewd minister dictated the policy of France. Or among them one may see patterns of the tables near which Cardinal Mazarin stood when he said of the French populace "Let them sing provided they pay." In our store we are showing many models of days when designers vied with one another to produce masterpieces that would win favor from the Vallieres, Maintenons, Du Barry and the like. These pieces give the home an atmosphere of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries and endear themselves to the housewife who wishes her home to have a distinctive appearance. Only two days remain in our January sale and they will be marked by the lowest prices of the month. Classical and modern patterns will be sold at prices which are almost irresistible.
