Fritzi Scheff has landed in New York from her mountain home in the Cumberlands with a new one. She says the reason she didn't stay to celebrate her birthday in the region her husband (John Fox) has made known to all the readers of "best sellers" is that last year the festivities in her honor included a ball game and three men were shot during its progress. She didn't care to witness anything as thrilling as that, so she hurried back to dear old Manager H. Willie Benton make a novel out of that, too. Fritzi's make a novel out of that, too. standing with the American association and the Eastern league as far as the buying, selling and drafting of players and the pro-tection of property rights are conserned. The American association club owners ob-ject to being placed on the same footing with the three leagues named for the reason that it is asserted these clubs do not have much more than half of the play-ing population that the association teams have.

The drafting of one player by the major leagues from each team in the association is not the only hardship worked on these clubs. They say they are handicaped in building up winning teams since they are unable to go out and compete with the major league clubs in buying in the mar-ket and they are practically prohibited from playing promising material with teams in the smaller leagues. Any player bought is subject to draft and any player placed with a smaller league may be grabbed the same way unless he is re-turned to the American association before August 20, while the major league may place a player of promise with any of the minor clubs with a strim to him. It is understood the American associa-tion magnates will demand that they be placed on a more equal footing with the American and National league teams or they will refuse to continue under the pres-ent agreement.
