

Desperate Desmond

Rosamond Dons the Villain's Hat and Coat, but Doesn't Get Away with the Impersonation

By Hershfield

I-A VOICE OF HOPE.
Claude Eclair, a prisoner in the office of the dreaded chief of the Third Section of the Russian police, is startled to recognize Rosamond's voice. The brave girl is announcing herself as Desperate Desmond, who is a friend of the dreaded chief and has a right to demand admittance. Claude cannot fathom the plan, but hope rises.

II-IN DISGUISE.
Outside the door of the dreaded chief's office, behold Rosamond. The brave girl, having found Desmond unconscious, has taken his hat and coat and put them on herself. Rosamond hopes that if the police catch just a glimpse of her they will mistake her for Desperate Desmond and obey her orders for the immediate release of Claude.

III-THE HELPLESS VILLAIN.
Desperate Desmond, the international crook, is securely trussed up and bound to the stairway of the building. The villain now experiences the sense of being utterly helpless, and it irks him to think that his plight is entirely due to the resourcefulness of Rosamond, the beautiful girl who refuses to desert her lover Claude for Desmond.

IV-A SUFFRAGETTE.
As Rosamond, togged out in Desmond's hat and coat, is trying to gain admittance to the room in which Claude is held prisoner, the janitor of the building sees her and instantly jumps to the conclusion that she is a militant suffragette from England. Grimly the janitor determines that she shall have no opportunity to worry the dreaded chief.

V-DETECTED.
As the janitor sees the unlucky Rosamond the door of the dreaded chief's office is opened from the inside and the poor girl's disguise is at once spotted, both by the janitor and by the police. It will go hard with the brave girl now, for the dreaded chief of the Third Section was never known to relent in his pursuit of an offender.

VI-THE VILLAIN FREED.
"I'm the boy!" cries Desperate Desmond; "and that's my coat!" The villain is freed once more and is now in a position to have both Claude and Rosamond consigned to the clutches of the dreaded chief. What plan the villain follows will be fully shown by the artist in tomorrow's paper. At present we don't know what the game is.
