

Claude Eclaire Can't Be Scared by a Ghost, but His Head Can't Resist Bricks.

GHOST TAPPINGS, EH? I'LL SHOW THESE FARERS UP. ALL CRAWL SLOWLY IN THIS DARK ROOM AND GIVE THE GHOST A SURPTSE!

Desperate Desmond

L-TO THE SPOOKS.

Before the drawn revolvers of the Russlan guards, Claude Eclaire . is being forced into the haunted house. Our here does not know that Resamond is a prisoner inside the house, but Desmond does, and that scoundrel is afrahi that Claude will discover the girl and foil his plan to force her into a

IL-DOWN THE CHIMNEY.

As soon as Desmond sees Claude enter the door of the so-called haunted house he promptly betakes himself to the roof and lowers himself into the chimney. Desmond knows Claude's Indomitable courage, and knows that no fear of ghosts will deter our hero from finding his way to the side of Rosamond in danger.

III.-SPIRIT RAPPING. Tap, tap! Tap, tap! In the ghostly slience of the dark house a strange rapping comes from the desolate hearthstone It is a mysterious noise, enough to rack the nerves of any ordinary man, but Desmond is not doing the tapping in the hope of frightening Claude. The villain knows better; he has another less honest plan.

IV .- ENTERING THE TRAP.

In the darkness of the baunted house the taps of the brick ring out ghostlike upon the ear of our hero Claude. But he knows that there are no such things as ghosts ad resolves to give the human agents the battle of their lives. Accordingly he creps ofrward cautiously toward the soudns from the hearthstone.

V .- SPRINGING THE TRAP.

NOW FOR A SHOWE

The moment Claude reaches the fireplace from which the mysterious sounds are coming he reaches out to grapple, as he supposes, with the person trying to frighten him. It is at this point the alert villain at the top of the chimney disiddges a great pile of bricks, which fail upon our hero's head, bean or coccanut.

VI.-AWAY! "I'm the boakil" cries Desperate Desmond, "and Claude is knocked outski!" True enough, our hero is stunned and Desmond takes advantage of the opportunity to force Rosamond to fice with him. Her heart is true to Claude and she expresses her contempt for the villata. Tomorrow we shall see how flight ends.
