MUSGRAVE WINS BIG BATTLE

Deputy Sheriff Masters Mystery of Vest Pocket Cigaret Machine...

Unpaid Bill for Board and Room Also Left by Young Man in Haste to Evacuate His Room.

After two months' conscientious study and practice Deputy Sheriff Jim Musgrave has attained to a high state of efficiency as a cigarette machine operator. With the little nickel-plated device he can make a cigarette in less than fifteen minutes. Not all the fellow deputies and visitors to the sheriff's office agree that the things Jim makes with his machine are cigarettes, but the deputy has a small majority and even those who are on the standpat side of the question admit that the products of Jim and the machine strongly resembles a cigarette. Some of them almost can be smoked.

Now Musgrave didn't buy the cigarette machine. Far be it from him to waste his funds on such devices. It was this way: Musgrave's home is so large that there really is more room than one family needs. Some months ago Mrs. Musgrave decided to take a roomer. Jim remembered the notion and the years had it. A dapper young chap with a suit of clothes that sounded like a steam piano that winds up the circus parade and one of those frank, open face countenances that inspires confidence, "seen your ad in the paper," and rented the room. Just to show how prosperous he was, said young man crowded three weeks' room rent into Mrs. Musgrave's hand before he even tested the Ostermoor.

Meals in His Room.
A couple of weeks later the roomer quit getting up at 7:30 in the morning. He said he was sick and would have to have his meals sent to his room. There was no restaurant nearby and, rather than let him starve to death, Mrs. Musgrave sent up the meals. She is a good soul, and at that time her experience with roomers of this variety was limited. She now has had more experience, but she has no roomer.

Jim had an abiding conviction that the roomer was not as sick as he let on. He is strongly of the opinion that the roomer's boss got sick of having around the shop a fellow who makes cigarettes with a cigarette machine. Jim's theory is that the boss pruned the roomer's name off the payroll and the roomer took umbrage at this and resigned in high dudgeon or something of that sort.

One morning Mrs. Musgrave sent some nice soft boiled eggs, four slices of nicely buttered toast, a cup of golden brown coffee and a few other things up to the room. Then it was discovered that the sick boarder had folded his night shirt like the Arabs and silently stolen away.

Leaves the Bedstead.
Knowing what she knows now, Mrs. Musgrave considers herself fortunate that that was all he stole. She believes he would have gotten away with the brass bedstead and the dresser if the stairway had been a little wider.

Jim went up to the room to take an inventory and discovered the cigarette machine, a box of empty cigarette tubes and what was left of a box of Turkish tobacco. Jim's first guess was that the roomer had left the vest pocket "pill" factory in lieu of cash in payment for two months' board and room. There is some doubt about this in the minds of some of Musgrave's friends, who hold to the opinion that the leaving of the "makin's" and the maker was a diabolical method of "rubbing it in" on Jim.

Mrs. Musgrave wanted to burn the truck, but Jim was for taking it down to the office and using it for the purpose for which it was supposed to have been invented. That was two months ago.

Figuring out how to manipulate the machine is about as easy as working some of those mental problems in the old arithmetic about how long it would take ten men to build the fence if twenty-three built two feet and ten inches a day each and the fence was 600 rods long. But with that dogged persistency which characterizes him Musgrave battled. He was going to work it or bust a gallus and the only thing that could stop him would be for the tobacco factories to run out of the raw material.

Adam Sloup says he would rather be one of T. R.'s representatives before the national committee than make the campaign Musgrave has made.

Musgrave Wins His Point.
Sheriff McShane says he has seen Musgrave sit at his desk and struggle, sending out ever and anon for another sack of Durham, until the perspiration rolled down his face in a raging torrent that would humble the Johnstown flood, and the tobacco lay on the floor around him ankle deep. The sheriff told Musgrave one day that his idea was wrong. He thought the method should be to buy cigarettes, remove the tobacco and put it in the machine and smoke that. Musgrave said that the sheriff was way wrong and he has proved it.

Musgrave's experience simply goes to show that nothing is impossible and that perseverance conquers all things—even the ever-ready vest pocket cigarette machine. To be sure, the cigarettes are not the most artistic. They are not as full as they should be and the tobacco generally drops out before Jim can get them to his lips. They are of odd and ever changing shapes. Most of them when completed resemble a section of a lemonade straw after the boy is through playing with it. Still, they look almost as much like a cigarette as anything else and Musgrave says they should be given the benefit of the doubt.

Albert Krug will begin the erection next week of a $15,000 home at Thirty-fourth street and Woolworth avenue. Plans for a handsome residence have been drawn by Architect J. J. Davey and the contract for construction has been awarded H. E. Olson.

Both Sides in Suit Want a New Trial

The unusual situation of one side in a lawsuit demanding a new trial and the other side being perfectly willing for a new trial to be granted exists in district court. George Sapetopoulos, against whom a verdict for $1,500 was returned for breach of promise to marry pretty Angelika Katsura, filed a motion for a new trial. Attorneys for Miss Katsura declared they will not oppose the motion because they are confident that if the case is tried again they will receive an even greater verdict.

HAS NO JURISDICTION IN THE FRANKLIN CASE

Holding that his court had no jurisdiction as the crime of which the defendant was charged with was committed at Bayard, Neb., and not in the Omaha district, Judge W. H. Munger took the case against Dr. William S. Franklin out of the jury's hands and instructed a verdict of not guilty.

Dr. Franklin will probably be re-indicted by a grand jury at North Platte and his case tried in the federal court at that city some time this fall.

The defendant was charged with the mailing of a letter to Mrs. Anna Wilson of Omaha in which he stated he had sent to her by express a diamond ring. The ring, it was alleged, belonged to Mrs. Wilson and that Franklin kept the ring in his possession.

CLUB BUYS ITS FURNITURE

Hayden Bros. Secure Contract for Furnishings for Commercial Club.

ARTS AND CRAFTS DESIGN USED

Fumed Quarter Sawed Oak is Selected—New Quarters to Be Supplied Throughout with Very Latest Designs.

Contracts are signed for the furniture for the new home of the Commercial club in the Woodman of the World building. Hayden Bros. were the successful bidders and won out after the strongest kind of competition.

The Commercial club committee insisted that the new club rooms be furnished only with the best to be had and the furniture made of the best materials secured to secure the latest designs. Fumed quarter-sawed oak of the arts and crafts design was finally selected and the contract given to the furniture department at Hayden Bros., of which Tom Crawford is manager. The finest quality of leather is to be used.

The contract includes dining tables and chairs, settees and rockers, billiard room furniture, lounges and desks, bookcases, filing cases, furniture for the private offices, committee rooms, lounging room, rotunda and general offices.

The contract is one of the most important of its kind which has been let for some time and the bidding was most spirited. The Commercial club appointed a special committee, of which Gould Dietz was chairman, and this committee spent considerable time looking over the various samples, finally selecting the arts and crafts design.

This furniture is to be ready for delivery for the new club rooms in the Woodman of the World building and it is estimated there will be more than five car-loads.

Ure Would Cancel Interest on Back Personal Taxes

City Treasurer W. G. Ure and City Attorney Rhine have decided to look for a loophole in the law that fixes interest on delinquent personal taxes. Hundreds of delinquents have notified the treasurer that they did not know they owed taxes, and as the interest in instances amounts to 25 per cent they object to paying it.

Dan Callahan and others notified the city council that they were willing to pay their taxes without interest. These taxes, in Callahan's case, have been delinquent for twelve years. The council referred the matter to the legal department.

City Attorney Rhine says the city cannot accept taxes without the interest, the payment of the taxes alone being considered a partial payment. Mr. Ure believes the city would secure thousands of dollars if a course could be adopted and taxpayers notified that taxes would be accepted without interest.

Prior to 1890 property owners were not notified when their taxes were delinquent. Sometimes they called to pay and found they owed the city nothing. This irregularity arose out of a card index system which did not correspond with the books. City Treasurer Ure has instructed his employees to go to the books when a citizen calls to pay personal taxes before telling whether or not he owes anything.

Glass Eye Knocked Out of a Creditor by a Wrathful Grocer

Charles Nesacheck, proprietor of a grocery store at Fourteenth and William streets, was fined $50 and costs for assaulting Mike Svatoe, one of his customers. Svatoe is indebted to Nesacheck and unable to pay the bill at this time.

Nesacheck met Svatoe on the street and demanded immediate payment. The latter told him he did not have the money and was attacked in a brutal manner. In the bout Svatoe lost his glass eye and several inches of epidermis.

Through his attorney Nesacheck gave notice of appeal to the district court.
