OLD OFFICERS AND LONG RIDE

Untimely Death of General Pred Grant Ascribed to Army Endurance Tests.

By an implication so clear as to be little less than an accusation, the New York Medical Record ascribes the untimely death from "heart failure" of General Frederick D. Grant to the strain imposed upon him as well as other army officers approaching the retirement age by the endurance riding tests to which they are all annually subjected.

That it is well for army officers to h able to take long rides on horseback no body denies; it is perhaps well that the unavowed but not concealed object of these tests-to make way for the promotion of young officers by influencing the old ones to retire betimes-should be attained. Certainly it is not well, how-

"The Best Built Car in America"

To Car Owners

What is your operating cost-say, for tires? 2 cents or 20 cents for every mile your car travels?

The answer depends more upon the name-plate of your car than the make of tire. "The Best Built Car in America" contributes more in "life" to a given make of tire than any other car.

The reason is simple. It is the LIGHTEST at 57 pounds per horsepower, and the most perfectly "balanced."
