Turkish positions in Detchich mountain, which commands the road to Scutar. At 3 o'clock the Turks landed troops on the shore of Lake Scutar near the Montenegrin frontier. A general engagement followed and was still in progress at 5 o'clock in the afternoon over an extensive front.

Crown Prince Danilo, who is commander-in-chief, has just ridden in with Prince Peter from the battlefield to the king's headquarters for fresh instructions.

War Not Extended.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—Another day has elapsed without so far as is known, any extension of the Balkan war. The earlier rumors that Bulgaria and Serbia have declared war are not confirmed. None of the embassies or legations in London tonight had heard of any development since Montenegro made its hostile declaration against Turkey. It may be assumed that while making some show of deference towards the powers' intervention, the Balkan states are busily engaged in completing the concentration of their forces.

The king of Greece returned to Athens today and some definite move now can be expected on the part of Greece.

It is suggested that the Montenegrin advance on Brana, near the frontier, may indicate the intention of that country to effect a junction with the Serbian army coming from the north. No further details of actual fighting have been received.

The Russian government has issued a denial of the reported mobilization of its army. Russia declares that all the reservists called up for a test have already been disbanded. It is understood that Germany will protect Turkish subjects in the Balkan states should war ensue.

A Montenegrin force which crossed the Turkish border has been annihilated, according to a dispatch from Constantinople, which declares 4,000 Albanian troops have invaded Montenegro.

Other States Healtier.

PARIS, Oct. 9.—The French foreign office at a late hour tonight was still without a reply from Sofia, Athens or Belgrade, and the only suggestion thus far as to its possible tenor is found in the remark of the Bulgarian foreign minister when the note of the powers was delivered that "Perhaps it would have had a better chance of success if presented a fortnight earlier."

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 9.—The sultan went to Top Kapu palace today to pray over the relics of the prophet treasured there, for the success of the Ottoman arms.

LUMBARD DIES IN CHICAGO

away she went with him as his bride.

Those who knew them will ever remember the stately couple and the charm of their society. They lived together for half a century, Mrs. Lumbard dying a few years ago.

For a time Jules Lumbard traveled for a picture house in Sandusky, O. He was in Chicago, when Sumner was fired upon, immediately he returned to go to the front as adjutant of the Eighth Illinois cavalry. Then came to him a terrible fate. His wife's kinsfolk were all in the army of the confederacy. She was torn with emotion and said that his going would kill her. He believed and surrendered his commission.

Known by Lincoln.

Engaging with Root and Cady, he became the editor of their musical journal. During this time he and his brother, Frank, began to assist in the raising of troops by singing war songs at all the big meetings. In Chicago and throughout the northwest they sang, and their singing was greeted with enthusiasm. They came to know intimately all the distinguished public men of the time. Lincoln knew them well, and cherished them with high regard. In the fall of 1863 the brothers visited the army at Vicksburg, as the guests of Captain Osbourn, who commanded Grant's body guard. McPherson, Sherman and Logan entertained them at their headquarters and they sang nightly for the soldiers. Here Frank Lumbard learned "Old Shady" from a negro—the song which John Hubbard, assistant postmaster of Chicago, still sings. Hubbard sang in those days with the Lumbards, and he and Jules are the last of those old singers—Church, Charles Smith, Bob Howard and Yates—who helped to make the war songs famous.

Once Had Fortune.

In the days of the old excitement in Pennsylvania Jules Lumbard went to the Keystone state. He accumulated a fortune of $300,000 and went with his wife to live in New York. His splendid voice charmed all who heard it, and the beauty, wit and vivacity of Mrs. Lumbard made them the center of rare society. He sang "Elijah" with Parepa and he sang with Emma Thursty, Whitney, Julia Northall, Castle, Campbell and Tagliopetra. And his music was free. He never sold his voice. Henry Ward Beecher said from his pulpit that Jules Lumbard did more for charity than any other man in New York or Brooklyn. And because of this his fortune disappeared.

ARCHBOLD ON STAND IDENTIFIES LETTERS SENT TO LAWMAKERS

considered me under the ban," said Mr. Archbold.

The letter in full was: "WHITE HOUSE, April 26, 1904.—My Dear Mr. Archbold: I am in receipt of your letter of the 23d, and shall carefully take up the name of your brother-in-law with the hope that I can promote him. Sincerely yours, "THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

The other letters and telegrams related to one recently made public by Mr. Hearst in which Congressman Sibley wrote Archbold that President Roosevelt was anxious to see him, and advising him to come to Washington and take luncheon with the president. The letters addressed to Sibley expressed Archbold's report that he could not come and expressed the hope that he might later visit the president. Archbold told the committee he did not go to the White House at that time, January, 1904.

"Mr. Roosevelt on the stand before this committee put me in the peculiar attitude of having been brought to luncheon with him in 1908 at Oyster Bay by Senator Bourne," said Mr. Archbold. He said that on a visit to the White House President Roosevelt had spoken of the return of Mr. Archbold's daughter and son-in-law from Africa.

"I must have you bring them over," the president said, according to Archbold, and later added he went on the day appointed to Oyster Bay at the invitation of Colonel Roosevelt.

Archbold declared it was "amazing that a man in Mr. Roosevelt's position would make the assertion that because of his contributions of money to Penrose for campaign purposes Mr. Penrose should be expelled from the senate."

"It is a monstrous thing to say," said Mr. Archbold.

A. H. Plant, comptroller of the Southern railway, said he knew of no contributions to the pre-convention campaign this year and did not turn over any fund to Congressman Underwood's managers before or during the Baltimore convention.

John D. Archbold followed Plant on the stand. Archbold had testified before the committee in August. Chairman Clapp took up the examination of the Standard Oil man as to the so-called Archbold letters, recently published. He first called attention to a letter to Senator J. B. Foraker, dated March 28, 1900, reading: "In accordance with our understanding, I beg to enclose you certificate of deposit for $15,000 and ask for receipt in reply."

Money Was For Foraker.

"I have no doubt I wrote the letter," said Archbold. The payment was made for the services of Senator Foraker as counsel in our Ohio affairs; that, and that only.

Senator Clapp showed to the witness a reproduction of another letter written to Senator Foraker, dated April 17, 1900, referring to an enclosed certificate for $14,000.

"I have no doubt I wrote it," said Archbold.

"What does it relate to?"

"To the same business relationship," said Archbold.

Another letter of November 25, 1900, enclosing a certificate of deposit of $10,000, "in pursuance of our understanding in our talk over the telephone," Archbold said was sent as a result of the same legal duties performed by Senator Foraker. A letter of December 11, enclosing a certificate of deposit for $5,000, the witness said was due to the same relationship, that of counsel.

Senator Clapp produced a copy of a magazine showing what purported to be a photographic copy of a letter to the late Senator M. A. Hanna, dated January 18, 1900.

"I have no recollection of it, but I've no doubt I wrote the letter," said Archbold.

Refers to Legislation.

The letter referred to "threatened and very objectionable legislation at Columbus," concerning which Archbold said he referred to talk to Senator Hanna. It referred particularly to people active in supporting a resolution "for an investigating committee," and asked Senator Hanna to "do everything possible to compass their defeat."

Archbold asked to be allowed to explain the letter.

To Prevent Strikes.

"That was the year of strike legislation in various state legislatures," said Archbold, "and it was necessary for all corporate interests to appeal to their friends to prevent that sort of thing. It explains my letter to Senator Hanna."

Chairman Clapp then produced a copy of a letter from Archbold to former Representative G. H. Grosvenor of Ohio, on October 27, 1900, enclosing $1,000.

"I think that was to aid in his campaign for re-election," said Archbold.

Archbold could not recollect receiving another letter of which Senator Clapp showed him a photographic copy, written by Hanna, asking for assistance in the Ohio campaign and ending with the postscript:

"This whole fight is against the corporations and me as their champion."

The witness said he believed the handwriting was that of Senator Hanna.

Giddings, the silver-tongued and golden-throated Giddings of Oklahoma, had just made his speech in the Baltimore convention. He was receiving congratulations and mopping his brow when a reporter came up and said:

"Name, please?"

"Giddings."

"Where from?"

Giddings waved his arms.

"I am from opulent Oklahoma," he said.

Next day he discovered by the papers that Giddings of Opulent, Okla., also spoke.

HE GAVE THE RACE AWAY

Untimely Condemnation of Rural Sport Disconcerts a Train Crew.

Running north from Muskogee, Okla., are two railroads which parallel each other for several miles. One of them is an old road, well ballasted, and laid with heavy steel. The other is newly built by a small company and is in anything but good condition. But the trainmen in the employ of the new road are very loyal to their new company and many a time would race the trains of the other road, with more or less disastrous results, for their road is not yet in condition for fast running.

At last the management of the new road, tired of the expense of clearing up wrecks due to the rivalry, gave very positive orders against further racing with the fast trains of the older road. But one day a freight train on the new road left the Muskogee yards just in time to start even with a freight on the other road. The race continued for several miles, when a broken joint on the small rails of the new road put the locomotive and several cars in the ditch. As it was only a few miles from the scene of the accident to Muskogee, a wrecker, accompanied by the general superintendent, was soon on the scene.

The train crew were telling the official how slowly they were going and were looking very blue at the prospects of an investigation when an old farmer, who was an interested spectator in the work of clearing up the wreck, and who was unaware of the identity of the superintendent, stepped up to the conductor and said:

"I wouldn't feel so darned blue about it; if the blamed thing stayed on the track you'd have beat them all hollow."—Kansas City Star.

The Bright Side.

After the ways and means committee had been compelled to leave its old quarters and go over to a new house of representatives office building some of his friends were sympathizing with Champ Clark.

"It might have been worse, Champ," they said. "Cheer up. Pretty soon they will have the electric cars running in the subway, and then you can ride over."

"Yes," replied Clark. "It might have been worse. Reminds me of an Irishman I knew down in St. Louis who had both of his legs cut off by a railroad train. It might have been worse, Mike," they said.

"Sure," Mike replied; "suppose I had been a chorus girl."

EFFICIENCY AS IT MIGHT BE

Insufficient Train Accommodations Prompt a Few Pertinent Remarks.

Sometimes we may not know the hidden reasons why public utilities corporations do not perform their functions as efficiently as they might and it behooves us not to criticize too sharply without that information.

An instance cited editorially by the Detroit Free Press is one that in some other form will probably recur to the memory of many readers: "A mail train runs from the station in a city not far from Detroit, which has only one coach for passengers. On a hot day recently there was an unusually large crowd of passengers to go on that train—300 or more. When the train came the 300-odd rushed to board it. There was not room in the one car for more than a third of them. The others, women, children, old men, were jammed into the baggage car, on the steps, anywhere. The conductor tried to persuade them to take a later train, saying his was only a mail train."

"But the passengers insisted, and finally, after great discomfort had been endured, when the train had gone a mile or so through the parks, another car was put on and the discomfort lessened in some degree at least.

"Now, someone about that station must have known long before the train arrived that the number of passengers awaiting it was unusually large. Only a little trouble would have brought that car to the station in time to have saved 200 or more persons acute discomfort, anger and annoyance. But it was not done."

As in the charge of the Light Brigade and the wreck of the Titanic, no doubt someone had blundered; and someone is always blundering; sometimes it is the same person, and yet he remains undiscovered.

But in mitigation of those troubles it is only fair to say that railroad magnates have recently declared that they need several billions of dollars in order to give better service and can't get the billions. With money enough, "someone about that station" near Detroit could have been employed whose business it was particularly to think of adding the needed extra coach. Best? Though it is a long way from billions of dollars to such a detail.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.
