Inside Story of Withdrawal Game of Hide and Seek

The inside story of the recent mix-up by which the entry of "Tom" Blackburn into the congressional race was withdrawn and then the withdrawal withdrawn when John L. Kennedy withdrew, has at last leaked out. This is the way it is explained by a court-house official who is in position to know what really

You see, in the original line-up it was dead cinch for Kennedy, but he did not want to jeopardise his election by a factional primary fight, and started machinery in motion to force Blackburn off. The result was accomplished finally by an agreement by which both apparently submitted their claims to a friendly board of mediation, whose dedision was to say which should withdraw in favor of the other.

The pre-arranged award was against Blackburn, and he suddenly discovered that the condition of his wife's health would not permit him to make a campaign. He mailed his withdrawal to the secretary of state, addressed a letter to Kennedy for public consumption, left for parts unknown in the western end of the state. Kennedy now read his nomination clear, but right at this point bumped into a number of friends who told him that unless he let up on ins pronounced advocacy of woman suffrage, he would beat not only himself but the whole ticket. He wouldn't let able to fill. up, so he concluded that sudden press of urgent business prevented him from running, whereupon he withdrew. As on as Blackburn learned of this, he immediately discovered that his wife's tiness would not interfere with his campaign at all, and came back posthaste in a response to a message from "Bob" Smith to break in the running again, and get busy for the slate. "There's the

MUST QUIT PARKING AUTOS NEAR THE FIRE HYDRANTS

City Commissioner C. H. Withnell has asked the aid of the police department in enforcing the ordinance prohibiting the parking of automobiles within fifteen feet of fire hydrants. Commissioner Withnell said the work of the fire department was seriously hampered by the violators of this ordinance. At a recent fire it was necessary to haul two or three automobiles away with fire trucks before the hose could be connected with the hydrant -a delay that was serious.

An appeal to city commissioners to compel Police Judge Charles Foster to enforce the city health ordinances will be made by Health Commissioner R. W. Connell, who says 'it is impossible to enforce the ordinances while Foster sits on the bench.'

Dr. Connell said that out of ninety-four complaints against milkmen for selling impure milk only eleven convictions were secured, and of these one man, for instance, had his fine suspended four consecutive times.

The health department revoked this man's license to sell milk, because, said Dr. Connell, he continued to sell adulters ated and dangerous milk and was let off always with suspended fines.
