The Dietz party, which included Miss Evelyn Stickney of Minneapolis, was in Paris when the war started. They went through many novel experiences. Miss Stickney even having to play waitress at their hotel, as all the help had gone to war. They left their baggage, excepting hand grips, and had to almost buy an auto in which to flee to the coast. All along the route to the channel, they were beld up for fabulous prices for small amounts of "petrol" or gasoline.

Reaching London safely, they planned to spend the fail and winter there, if unable to leave for America. After several works, they managed to sail, and 'anded at New York Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Peycke Marooned by War in Hamburg Are Safe

Reassuring letters have just been received from Mr. and Mrs. Earnest Peyche, well known in Omaha and parents of Mrs. A. F. Smith of this city, marooned by the war in Hamburg. Mr. Peycke writes that they are comfortable, although unable to get out because boats dare not traverse the Baltic on account of the mines. He had at first been inconvenienced by dack of his passport, but a cable from Secretary Bryan to the American consul had procured him permission to leave, which he hoped to make use of as soon as poselble. Mr. Peycke had been in communication with Mr. E. M. Andreesen of Omaha and writes that the latter had engaged return passage on the Rotterdam and had expected to go to Holland with several companions by automobile, but was dissuaded from doing so, being warned that the trip would be cangerous.

O YOU ever wonder how some of our society women can always look so well groomed? Whether motoring or driving their electrics, or dancing or playing golf, they are always immaculate. The other evening, on a motor picnic and swim at Valley, I noticed in particular a charming young matron of our party. She was an excellent swimmer, so I watched for the beauty spot (a tiny black velvet affair) to come off after the swim. But not at all. When we all were seated for the country chicken dinner I glanced across the table, and there was the beauty spot. How did she do it?

Then, again, the other afternoon I was riding with a friend in her electric. This friend has dainty feet that are always well shod in the very newest footwear. She was wearing a pair of stunning new pumps, or semi-colonials, of patent leather, the upper part a light gold bronze, with hosiery the exact shade. After getting into the car she slipped off the dainty shoe (the left, I think) which she uses for the brake and put on a heavier patent leather pump. "Using my foot on the brake gets my shoes out of shape," she remarked casually. It is the small details of dress which makes this woman so well groomed, I thought to myself.

Nearly every woman who drives her own electric has an extra glove to save her white ones from being either soiled or torn in the seams, for driving any kind of a car is hard on gloves, but the extra shoe was a nov-
