SCHOOL AND COLLEGE WORK

School of Fine Arts at University of Nebraska Active.
PAINTINGS NOW ON EXHIBITION
Loan Collection Installed at Library Building, Where Students and Others May Get Benefit of Examples.
The School of Fine Arts, which is starting its third year, starts the semester with a considerably increased enrollment. Director Grummann is pleased with the growth that the school has had, and is making every effort to increase the facilities for instruction in the various departments.
Several attractive collections of paintings are now on exhibition in the fine arts gallery, top floor of the library building, and they are valuable, not only as references for students specializing in the work, but to outsiders as well. A collection of Japanese color paintings has attracted especially the attention of visitors to the gallery. Four paintings by Ernst Roehlk of St. Louis, a graduate of the Dresden School of Design, are considered very good. In addition, eight studies by Miss Elizabeth Dolan of Lincoln, formerly a student in the School of Fine Arts, are hung in the gallery.
Prof. Grummann also announces that in addition to the paintings of the Carnegie institute, which will make up the major part of the midwinter exhibit of the Nebraska Art association, some of the best paintings and studies of Lawton Parker will be on exhibition. Mr. Parker's chief works are in figure painting, although he also paints some landscape and nature works. His most important canvases will be in Lincoln for the midwinter exhibit.
Work on the university student and faculty committees is progressing rapidly. Proof-reading, one of the hardest tasks connected with the publication of the directory, is going on daily, every effort being made to eliminate errors.

The work on the new addition to the Normal is being pushed in order that it may be completed as soon as possible. It is evident that the additional room which it will afford is very much needed, owing to the fact that the model school has been transferred to the normal building. The library has been transferred to the rear of the assembly room, and the old library is being used as a classroom. In spite of this readjustment, classes must recite in any room which may be available at the time.

Inf., says, "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is worth its weight in gold and I take pleasure in recommending it." For sale by all dealers.—Advertisement.

HISTORICAL EXHIBIT TO STAY

Relics of Pioneer Days Left at Court House This Week.
OLD SETTLERS END MEETINGS
Sessions of Nebraska State and Territorial Pioneers Conclude Sessions and Visit King's Highway.
The Nebraska state and territorial pioneers concluded their reunion Saturday and large numbers of them in the afternoon and evening visited the King's highway and the motorcycle races. All the exhibits have been finished, the exhibit installed by the Nebraska State Historical society on the ground floor of the court house will remain intact all next week. This was the decision reached by Secretary Paine yesterday.
The hundreds of articles that bridge the space of years between pioneer days and the present are daily viewed by crowds of spectators and Secretary Paine felt that he could not deprive those coming next week of the opportunity to see the collection.
Many articles were added to the historic collection last week and some interesting ones came in yesterday. There is nothing that is attracting more attention than the carriage in which Jesse Lowe, the first mayor of Omaha rode. It was installed in the collection yesterday. It was made by Andrew Simpson, now living in Omaha and it was not only the first automobile made in the city, but the first ever seen west of the Missouri river. It is a family conveyance, of fairly good style and in an excellent state of preservation, though made about sixty years ago. It is owned by members of the Lowe family.
Childs Collection Arrives.
The Charles Childs collection of rare relics was placed with the historical exhibit today, the daughters sending it in. In this collection is an old wooden trunk and a carpetbag that Charles Childs brought with him when he came from Ohio in 1856. There is also the deed to the property at Childs' point, south of Omaha. The parties making the conveyance are Otis Childs, Walter Lowrey, secretary, and William Rankin, treasurer of the Home Missionary board of the Presbyterian church, established at Bellevue in 1846. Photographs of Mr. Lowrey are shown.
The Childs' collection also contains the bar steylards that Charles Childs used in weighing the first grain in and the first flour out of the first flouring mill built west of the Missouri river. This was in 1856. Then, too, there is the grain fall that Mr. Childs used in threshing wheat raised in the summer of 1856 on some land that had previously been broken out on the mission property.
Secretary Paine regards the Childs' collection as a rare one and that the Nebraska Historical society has ever secured. He has been trying for a number of years to get it, but until his trip to Omaha at this time has been able to induce the Misses Childs to let it be added to the state and territorial exhibit.

Miss Kate McHugh, former principal of the Omaha High school, is a teacher at the University of Omaha. Her classes in English and Shakespeare are crowded.
Sophomores created a pleasant surprise after the chapel exercises Friday afternoon by liberating several doves to which they had attached their class pennants. They followed their surprise with a number of class yells.
In order to keep the academic classes separated from those of the university, preparatory students are attending school only in the forenoon. A separate corps of teachers have the academic students in hand.

FATHER FINDS FAMILY DEAD

Mrs. James Sip of Benson and Two Children Expire of Gas.
FOUND LEANING OVER RANGE
Probability that Burners Were Opened by Children and Not Noticed Until Fumes Became Overpowering.
Mrs. James A. Sip, 505 Garfield avenue, her daughter, Mildred, aged 4, and son, Richard, aged 4, were asphyxiated in the kitchen of their home Saturday. A pulmotor was rushed to the scene by Police Surgeon Foltz of the Omaha police department but all bodies were lifeless when it arrived.
The positions in which the bodies of Mrs. Sip and the children were in, when found by the husband and father, indicate strongly that the deaths might have been premeditated, but conditions about the room and their happy home life and good health are contradictory to this theory.
The mother was found leaning over the gas range, on which all burners were open, with a towel up to her face. One child was at her feet and the other a short distance away on the floor.
James A. Sip is a clerk at the Nebraska Clothing company. Yesterday morning, when he started for work, he kissed his wife goodbye as usual and declared that she was evidently in the best of spirits. Last night he returned home at 10 o'clock and found the house locked up tight. He was surprised, and with the aid of a neighbor, Charles Papes, forced his way into the basement and up to the room in which the bodies were found.
A tub in the middle of the floor indicated that the mother had probably just given the children a bath. Toys and other children's playthings were scattered about the room and some fancy work that the mother had evidently been working on lay on a table nearby. Groceries, delivered late in the afternoon, were on a rear porch untouched.
It is thought very probable that while the mother was preparing one child for a bath, the other turned on the gas accidentally, and that the fumes were not detected until it was too late. Every burner was open wide. The bodies indicated that they had been dead for several hours.
Mr. Sip, prostrated at the sudden wrecking of his home by the catastrophe, was taken to the home of a neighbor by Dr. Foltz.

Former Expositions Recalled by People On King's Highway

The old-timer took a stroll on the King's Highway and saw many faces which brought up old times when the Transmississippi exposition was in its prime. Everyone remembers Charlie De Krecko, who daily performed on his oriental instrument before the Streets of Cairo. Then there is Bill Scott of All Nations, who has visited Omaha many times since. Jack Berry is still doing the grandfiddling before the Oriental show as he did in days of yore. Delgarlan is there and all will remember him.
But who can forget Happy Holmes, the right-hand man with Skip Dundy during those happy days? His now is with the "Human Butterfly." In the exposition days he presided at the front door of the Dragon's Head. Now he has a different kind of a show. He is dressed differently. With his long coat he tells the crowd, "She floats, she flies, she dances in the air, Hindu hypnotism, it's wonderful, it's beautiful, the strangest show in the world, it's worth a dollar, costs a dime."
Who could resist such an alluring appeal? Evidently the crowd could not. They went in expecting to see a crude tent performance, but how different. A real orchestra. And the lady flew. She soared all over the tent. How did she do it? No one would tell and the spectators could not find out.
Oriental music, camels, all sorts of things to bring back the old times.

ANTI-SUFFRAGE SPEAKER TO REMAIN IN WAR ZONE
Miss Alice Edith Abell of New York, president of the Wage Earners' Anti-Suffrage league, who was to have been one of the speakers brought to Omaha by the Nebraska Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, has become so valuable to the relief workers in the war country that she will not return to this country for a considerable length of time.
Miss Abell was traveling abroad with some friends and was visiting her grandmother in Berlin when the war broke out. She worked for awhile with Ambassador Gerard and then moved on to The Hague, where she again offered her services to the relief committee. She is a stenographer.
Miss Marjorie Dorman, who is speaking for the anti-suffragists in Nebraska, is secretary of the Wage Earners' league.
