*Sunday. CATTLE-Receipts were not very heavy CATTLE—Receipts were not very heavy this morning, either here or at any market points, but they were plenty large enough to meet the requirements of the trade. As noted before in these columns the demand for beef is always limited at all market points during the holiday season. No one is looking for anything like a brisk demand for cattle units after January 1. anything like a brisk demand for cattle unth after January 1.

The few beef steers here this morning moved slowly at prices that were certainly no better than steady and if anything a little lower than yesterday, especially on the close. The best beeves here were good enough to bring $3.60, there being nothing good in sight.

Cows and helfers generally commanded good steady prices, but the market closed weak.

There were not enough stockers of feeders to cut much figure in the trade and prices were without noteworthy change. All the live stock markets of the country will be closed on Christmas day.
