are the most informal organizations in the world," it says. "Ahead ride a few officers, and then, in no particular formation, come the troops, some on one side of the road and some on the other. Toward the rear they straggle off in dwindling streams, wandering about the fields and plodding here and there, just as though each was off on an individual

"For miles after a regiment has passed one sees little groups trudging along, apparently perfectly contented and without a worry in the world. Yet at night they all appear for rations, and in the morning start off again in a solid formation. I am told that this method of marching has proved a great puzzle to the German airmen in trying to estimate the numbers of troops that are moving. When the columns are so strung out, it is almost impossible from any height to tell whether what one sees is a battalion in close formation or a company strung out. Most armies march in solid masses which can be seen and estimated accurately from a great distance. "The more one sees of the individual

of the Russian army the more one comes to like the common soldier here. He is the most good-natured, child-like, playful person in the world, and in the month I have been with the army I have not seen any disorder. On the road and in the camp, all seem contented and happy as long as the weather is fine. It must be admitted they took a little dismal in
