The Bee's - Home - Magazine - Page:

Read it Here-See it at the Movies.

Runaway June
By George Randolph Chester and Lillian Chester

irams corresponding to the installof "Runaway June" may now be the leading moving picture theBy arrangement made with the Plim corporation it is not enly to read "Runaway June" cach it also afterward to see moving a illustrating our story,
ight, 1915, by Serial Publication

Corporation 1

FIFTH EPISODE.

A Woman in Trouble,

CHAPTER I .- (Continued.) In there, amid the wreaths of curling women, and many of them nonehalantly puffed at cigarettes. At the instance the smiling Gilbert Blye's key grated the A large, yellow haired woman came hurrying from the salon with June's employment agency card in her hand. "Right this way, honey," she rasped in voice to which the honey was foreign. and she led the way to a small side room at the left of the saloon. As June reluctantly entered the strangely fur-

With a smile upon his lips and glinting in his dark eyes he hurried straight back toward the little room in which June stoud, now alone and frightened.

nished little room at the left Gilbert Blye

came in at the front door.

At that instant a huge, clumsy maid came tumbling up from the basement, followed by a puff of yellow smoke. With her eyes distended and her mouth open, ready for the yell of "Fire!" she rushed to the door of the saloon, but before she could reach it Gilbert Blye had her roughly by the arm and pushed her through the door which led to the basement. He stood staring at the smoke which came curling ominously through that opening, glanced again toward June's room and dashed down the stairs.

That was a strangely furnished little room in which June found herself. There were two deaks and a filing cabinet and some office chairs, but there were a luxurious couch and dainty hangings, a soft rug and pink paneled walls and the phone. The new secretary had made presently and explained the posting into was not one to prangle in emergencies small blank books of many memorandum slips. Each slip contained the name of woman and a sum of money. There vere no slips of men, but there were index cards about men. June puzzled as to what sort of business this might be.

The page girl swished in with one of shore face was puffy and more colored wholesome, took the slip, chair than the rest was dealing. The on the gambler next to the dealer. She was a fluffy blond with a foverish glitter in her eyes, and she was bent so intently upon the fall of the cards that she did not notice the door open and Poor June! She glanced about her with growing repugnance, She was abjectly miserable, and suddenly she was sobbin. In the gambling room the fluffy blond who had played so feverishly staked and turned impatiently to look for the page pathies and held her. girl. She met instead the cold, hard eye of the yellow haired woman, who quietly motioned her. The player rose reluctantly, and fright came into her face as she followed into the hall and to the little office where June had been installed. announced the yellow-haired woman.

"You've reached the limit, Mrs. Perry," turning on the unlucky one Sharply as she closed the door. Here is the I. O. U. Belle brought to me. I have not O. K.'d "I wouldn't O. E. it for 50 cents," snapped the other. "Now I want action. You'll telephone your husband from this

"No, no!" The woman wrung her hands. "Til talk to him tonight!"
"I know that game," she scorned, and from June's deak she took an index card. "Eight-o-eight-o Garden," she told the new secretary. "Ask for Mr. Perry and say that his wife wishes to speak with "No!" cried Mrs. Perry hysterically and reached over June's shoulder to take

Advice to Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Think About Your Work

Dear Miss Fairfax; I am 19 years old and deeply in love with a sirl two years my junior. I met her at an affair Christmas night, 1913. Her mother raised no objection until the end of last summer, when she refused to let her go out with me. Her objections are due to my small salary. I really am not earning enough, but eventually I expect to be able to. Should I continue my attentions or rhould I break with her?

1. L. S.

Hove of 19 years should really not be Bloys of 19 years should really not be ndulged in mad love affairs. Since the girl's mother objects to you, and since you are not in a financial position to support a wife (and why should you be at your age?), you have no right to insist on continuing your attentions. Certainly it will not break your heart or ruin your ambitions to give up this girl. If you are a manty and worth-while chap, prove it by two or three years' hard-work and by winning success. Put the energy you are wasting on a boyish love affair into your work and you will get ahead in the world and be in a position to be regarded with favor by this girl's mother or by the mother of any other girl you care for a few years from now.

Tell Her the Truth.

Miss Pairfax: I am a young man
I have been keeping company a young lady for about eight 5. During that time I used to call often. Lately I stopped, thinking not right for a young man to keep my with a young lady, as long as

Tell har the truth, There is ng or hurting her by an truth, she still cares to be friends it be quite fair for you to do so.

The Spark and the Fire

By Nell Brinkley

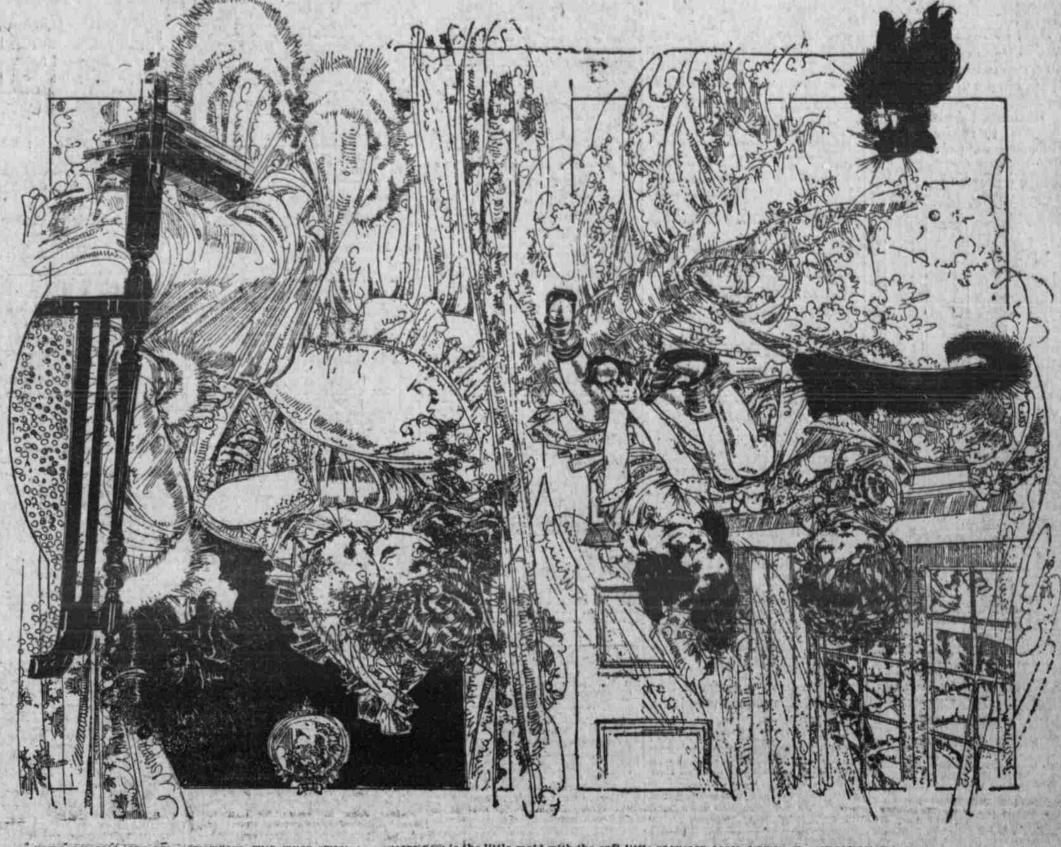

ceiling. It was all so incongruous. And no move toward the phone. She was the work-it was queer too. The reliow staring at the reliow haired woman in haired woman came in from the parlor astonishment. That determined person She snatched up the phone herself and called the number.

scornfully stated to Mrs. Perry while she waited. You'd sting me for $1,000 rather than sting your husband for it. See this card?" She held it out. It contained the dum elips. The yellow head, name of Jack W. Perry, his business address, his home address, his financial rating, probable income, clubs and telecoked at the name on it, frowned, shook phone numbers. And the unfortunate her head and went out with the girl. She Mrs. Perry seemed to shrink into hopeentered the salon and stood surveying less despair as she realized the implacthe scene with cold abstraction. Around able organization against which she had long table sat the women whom June pitted herself. "Mr. Perry, please." The yellow-haired woman's voice had underof them and stocks of playing chips, and gone a complete change. It was very a rawboned woman sitting on a higher pleasant of inflection, though it rasped. The "His wife wishes to speak with him." oman fixed her atten- She handed over the telephone, and June, seeing Mrs. Perry's unsteadiness, ros and compassionately kave the woman her chair. The yellow-haired one walked calmly over to her own desk and took up the extension 'phone

June looked at her hat and coat. She seemed quite bewildered. She could not quite understand what this was all about. but she did know that it was all unpleasant and heartless and degrading. She was starting to go when something lost the last chip in front of her. She on Mrs. Perry's face touched her sym-

(To Be Continued Tomorrow.)

someoody said long ago, somewhere, with much sweet-is a warm thing to lay at your heart—the belief in this. the other's baby. And some day the doll-baby breaks her forgotten is a princess-rose. For then you will know that the seed you held in your face into bits and is buried along with other memories, and heart blows into flower somewhere, in some fashion. weight heart in your body for knowing that.

mere now is the little maid with the soft little snouncers | rect nower or primrose tiame, and the small petal. The spark under the gray ash has fauned into a sibility of a great reality that has come!-Nell Brinkley.

They meant not man-and-maid love alone, you must like the pale yellow butterfly of the spring-but with Eve's bubbles and clutches at life with a fist like a peach-bloom know-but any love: for a flower, a child, your friend, heart in her small body and a doll-baby with taffy hair and petal. The spark under the gray ash has fanned into a the glory of the sunset in the western sky, your dear mother violently blue eyes, with regular twigs for eyelashes, cher- leaping fire. The miniature as tiny as the hollow at the with soft eyes. No matter if these should be broken, or lost ished close to her breast. And another small maid from the foot of your throat is a picture in "heroic" size that reaches or buried, or fled away, still were they not dead! And this very same Eve-pattern pearling enviously and burningly to to the sky and against the throne of God. The bud that was "No love ever dies." So don't ever think it. The love another bud in the garden of loving seems dead. But it that you lavished somewhere that you think is dead may And you will sing more, I reckon, and carry a feather- isn't so a'tall! The bud of mother-loving lies fast and asleep have been but a tiny thing- and never lost-only the pos-

It's easy to learn the new steps with the music of the Victrola.

The following Omaha and Council Bluffs dealers carry complete lines of Victor Victrolas, and all the late Victor Records as fast as issued. You are cordially invited to inspect the stocks at any of these establishments.

Schmoller & Mueller

PIANO COMPANY Omaha, Neb. 1311-1313 Farnam St.

Branch at Nebraska 334 BROADWAY

Free Victrola Recital Friday from 3 to 4 P. M.

Corner 15th and Harney, Omaha. Cycle Co.

The Fox Trot, Castle Polka, and all the other new dances-all played loud and clear and in perfect time.

There are Victors and Victrolas in great variety of styles from $10 to $250 -at all Victor dealers.

Victor Talking Machine Co. Camden, N. J.

1513-15 Douglas Street, Omaha, and 407 West Broadway, - Council Bluffs, La.

Talking Machine Department in the Pompeian Room

