HAVE you a wealthy walk? Walks, psychologists affirm, show the strongest indications of characteristics of the owner, but rarely have we known that they announced the state of their checkbooks. An Omaha matron, the wife of a well known real estate man, while traveling recently, was asked by a fellow traveler, "Where are your diamonds?" Now this matron is very conservative, and, as she says, to her sorrow never possessed a diamond in her life. On receiving a reply to this effect, the speaker insisted that it was an impossibility, and would not become reconciled to the unfortunate state of the lady's jewel box. Again and again the diamondless passenger emphasized this fact, with the strongest proofs, but nothing could convince the stranger. "It is impossible! It is impossible!" she said, "for you have a wealthy walk."

SICK JUROR HALTS TRIAL OF MATTERS

H. F. Kohlmeier of Wakefield Succumbs to Attack of Erysipelas and Delays the Case.

MAY RESUME NEXT MONDAY

The illness of a juror brought to an abrupt halt the trial of Thomas H. Matters in federal court Friday morning. The sick juror is H. F. Kohlmeier of Wakefield. He has erysipelas, which is an acute febrile disease, accompanied by diffused inflammation of the skin. It is considered contagious. He was attended by the government's physician, Dr. S. K. Spalding, who says he will be able to break up the attack in twenty-four hours.

Judge Youmans, who has been pushing the big trial with lengthened court hours, dismissed the jury under orders to report for duty Saturday morning. It is not likely, however, that the trial will proceed before Monday morning. The trial of Thomas H. Matters on the charge of aiding and abetting President Melchior Luebben of the defunct First National bank of Sutton to issue certificates of deposit without authority, began Tuesday, February 9, and has now been in progress nine days, with no sign of the end being in sight.

Balliff in Charge of Jurors. The jurors, with the exception of the sick man, will have to remain at their hotel in charge of a balliff just much longer on account of the unexpected delay. The time of the attorneys and judge must also be largely wasted. In this connection several of the attorneys in the case referred to the wisdom of having a change in the state constitution, allowing certain measures to be taken in such cases. "In the long case the possibility of one of the twelve men in the jury being taken ill is considerable," said A. W. Lane of Lincoln, who is assisting United States Attorney Howell. "In some states they have a constitutional amendment allowing the case to proceed with eleven jurors in case one of them is taken ill. Certain states confine this rule to civil cases, but others allow such a procedure in even criminal cases. "Another means which has been devised to avoid the possibility of delay on account of illness of one of the twelve jurors is the swearing in of a thirteenth man with the regular twelve. "This thirteenth man sits through the trial precisely as the other jurors. If none of the twelve is taken ill, he has no part at all in determining the verdict. But if one of the men is taken ill this thirteenth man takes his place and the sick man drops out of the case permanently. It seems a very wise plan."

But Who Wants to Eat Any Muskrat?

WHITMAN, Neb., Feb. 18.—To the Omaha Bee: Will you please investigate and report through your valuable paper whether or not the muskrat is eaten as food. I understand it is used quite extensively in and around Atlanta and other eastern localities and is considered a very delicate morsel and often served at select dinners. Personally I have proven the meat to be finely flavored and to be most excellent in potpies. It should be first parboiled in soda water, after which it needs no further treatment.

Also I consider the meat fine fried. In the east it is called marsh rabbit. A READER. The muskrat has been used for food, but not to any great extent, because of the bad taste given to the flesh by the presence of the musk glands. The Encyclopedia Americana says on this subject: "The musky odor of these animals is due to a thick fluid secreted in two small glands near the generative organs which impart to the flesh a taint that makes it unpalatable to most persons." It is very widely used for its fur, 4,000,000 pelts being produced annually. It is a very prolific animal, having three to nine young at a birth and often three births a year. The fur is used principally for making gloves, collars, caps, capes, muffs, trimmings, linings, etc. Don't be Conspicuous. All kinds of ailments result from Constipation. Dangers in Fresh Milk

"30 per cent of the milk samples taken for bacteriological examination showed more than the legal number of bacteria." The above is taken from a Bulletin of the Chicago Department of Health. Statements like it appear in almost every bulletin issued by the health departments of various cities throughout the country. Disease of all kinds is being transmitted daily to human beings through the milk they use. Typhoid, scarlet fever and even tuberculosis are thus transmitted. Protect yourself and your family. Use milk that carries no disease germs. The safest milk is—

Cottage BRAND EVAPORATED MILK

Unsweetened Sterilized

The process by which Cottage Milk is sterilized destroys any germs the milk may contain. It is packed in germ-proof cans which keep it from exposure from the time it leaves our sanitary condenseries until it is opened in your kitchen. Cottage Milk overcomes all the dangers of contamination to which bottle milk is subjected in bottling, handling and delivering. Cottage Evaporated Milk is made fresh every day from milk that comes from the healthiest cows in the best dairying districts of the country. Nothing is added, only a part of the water taken out by evaporating. It has more than twice the food value of bottle milk and can be used for every purpose where you now use milk or cream. For cereals, for coffee, for cooking, for the children, it is the ideal, safe milk. Try a package today. You will like it and the convenience of always having a supply of fresh milk in your pantry will appeal to you.
