SPRING DAYS! Spring styles! Spring cleaning! Wasn't it funny how that very eligible bachelor reeked of gasoline at the last Subscription party? He was very magnificent that evening, on dit. To think that he would be driven to have his dress suit cleaned at the last minute. 'T est impossible—but it's not; it's the truth. The perfume floated bravely through the otherwise refreshing aroma of the ball room.

Well, come to think of it, several of my women friends harbor a perfume of gasoline frequently. They must dash their gloves in the fluid just before advancing to the front. A most estimable form of economy. But if they would only give the articles an airing before exhibiting them. A pair of lately cleaned gloves was my neighbor at luncheon last week, and the owner a hopeful little creature tried to drown the scent with perfume, and the effect—Mon Dieu—was ghastly.

They Say It "Up the Pole" in the Navy

Lieutenant M. J. Peterson, U. S. N., is in the city visiting his old school pal, Lieutenant T. M. Tipton, of the local naval recruiting station. They were classmates at Annapolis Naval academy and a warm friendship has continued. Lieutenant Peterson, known to his intimates as "Swede," is enroute from San Francisco to Des Moines, his home, where he will await orders. He has just returned on board the cruiser New Orleans from target practice off the coast of Nicaragua. At San Francisco he commanded a battalion in the parade when Vice President Marshall was there representing the United States government at the exposition. The lieutenant replied to friends who suggested that he accompany them on a social visit to a nearby oasis, by informing them that he is strictly "up the pole." This is the army and navy equivalent for "on the water wagon."

IDLE MEN ARE FEW NOW IN THIS CITY

Captain Kline Says He Has Very Few Calls Now for Free Beds at Salvation Army Home.

NO ONE NEED BE IDLE NOW

Idle men are growing very scarce at Captain Harry Kline's Salvation Army headquarters at 1112 Dodge street, according to Captain Kline. He says while he normally has 119 beds in the house, up to six weeks ago he had an extra thirty beds working, and fifty of these beds were occupied free because the men had not a cent with which to pay. "Today I haven't five men occupying free beds," he said. "And those who occupy these free beds are cripples or men incapacitated in some way so that they cannot be expected to get a job at this time. Of course I am carrying about ten men now who have just recently obtained a job and are boarding with me until they get their first pay check, when they can get a boarding place on the outside."

Captain Kline says the men have leaved out of his place and into jobs quite steadily in the last three weeks, and that most of them who are able-bodied are now provided for. "I got jobs for four of the men this week," he said, "and I know just where they are and that they are doing well. Six weeks ago I had three times as many applicants for assistance as I have now. Dozens of the men who at that time were eking out a miserable existence at my headquarters through the little old jobs I gave them are now situated in steady jobs and making their own way nicely. The thing for business men and employers of labor to remember is that they should give preference to married men in the hiring of their help, as these are the fellows that are not always asking for charity."

The Salvation Army is still striving to keep up a current library of castoff magazines from the homes of the city. Captain Kline says he still finds difficulty in getting enough magazines to supply his reading tables. He has his wagons out again this spring in the hope of gathering in many, as the housewives desire to get rid of old magazines with the spring housecleaning.

Sends All His Hard Earned Savings to Kin in Russ Army

Sam Tolsky, 1409 Cass street, is a waiter and a prudent and frugal man. Patiently and slowly he had amassed the sum of $12, which was safely deposited in the United States postal savings bank.

The other day a large, square envelope came, addressed to Sam. It bore Russian postage stamps, Russian post marks and a lot of red wax seal on the back bearing the legend, "Petrograd censorship for war," in Russian letters. Sam opened the letter and found it was from his brother, a soldier in the army of the czar. It was a pitiful letter, telling of privations and hardships and of hunger often suffered. There was a plea to Sam to send money from the land of peace and plenty. Sam didn't hesitate. He went straight to the postal savings department of the postoffice and withdrew all his money. "I am going to send it by a money order to my brother in the Russian army," he told the young clerk. "See, here is his letter."

Sam displayed the much-postmarked envelope with the red seal and then presented it to the admiring clerk, keeping only his brother's letter. "I will pray that a German submarine shall not sink the ship which bears my letter," said Sam with a smile as he left for the money order department.

Samson's New Bear Has Fancy Appetite; Renze is in Despair

"No, thanks, nothing but strained honey for me." This is the way the new trick bear at Ak-Sar-Ben den orders his meals. Gus Renze thought he was bringing in an important addition to the initiation equipment when he dragged that bear out of the Ozark mountains of Missouri and brought him to Omaha. He had not reckoned with the board bill.

He tried bread. He thought that was expensive enough with the size of the loaves being steadily cut down and the jitney-per-loaf price holding out. But his apprehensions were dispelled at once. For the bear would not eat it. He tried liver. No. He tried pork chops, and lamb chops. He ordered porthouse, and still the bear refused. One suggested to Renze that he bring on the desert. So he tried honey. The bear smiled like a cat in a cheese box and licked the jar clean.

Barnett, auditor of claims against Douglas county, has been appointed chief auditor by County Clerk Dewey as a result of the passage of a law by the legislature making the county clerk ex-officio county comptroller.
