With the approach of Ak-Sar-Ben week the interests of all social sets is centered in the Ak-Sar-Ben festivities and the ball. A great deal of speculation is rife just now as to whom the honor of being queen will be given to. Those who are sed of the so-called superior knowledge of society's whims and fancies fasten the honor to the daughter of one of our very well known physicians and a debutante of last year. Others feel sure they have guessed the lucky girl as the daugh ter of a wholesale merchant and debutante of this fall, and the third surmise is a debutante of last year and the daughter of a former king.

Next to being queen of Ak-Sar-Ben, the osition of special maid of honor to the queen is the most coveted place in the coronation ceremony, and this week twelve young women received their summons to the Court of Quivers in that capacity, and their names are: Miss Margery McCord, Miss Marion Towle, Miss Louise White, Miss Isabel Vinsonhaler, Miss Gertrude Metz, Miss Charlotte Callahan, Miss Dorothy Weller, Miss Mary Megeath, Miss Helen Clarke, Miss Helen Ingwersen, Miss Katharine Davenport and Miss Helen Murphy.

Of these chosen ones five will be debutantes of the season, Miss White, Miss Insonhaler, Miss Towle, Miss McCord and Miss Metz. Miss Weller goes east directly after the ball for several months, Miss Megeath and Miss Ingwersen return to school at Briar Cliff, N. Y., and Chicago, respectively. Miss Davenport will at home this winter, but will devote her time to music. Miss Callahan finished school a year ago and Miss Murphy
