The picking up of the crew of the Sallor Prince created a feeling of excitement which was at fever heat, when suddenly a submarine came to the surface about two miles distant and fired a shot over the Barulos, evidently as a signal for it to stop.

"Instantly, a wild panic broke loose," Prince had made their escape.

"Led by the crew and fireroom force. the passengers rushed for the boats. n, unable to get to the boats, threw their children into the sea and jumped after them. Frightened sallors cut the solding the small boats and when the latter crashed into the water three of the six were swamped and emptied of their human loads.

"I was at the rall when the submarine ppeared and I started back toward the stairs leading below, with the idea of helping to quell the panic. I was caught in the rush and literally forced over the eide into the sea. I had a hard time to keep above the water, my difficulties being aggravated by the struggles of others trying to eatch hold of me. "It seemed that I had no sooner struck the water than the submarine appeared under the bows of our ship.
