

New York City May Become the Fur Center of World

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—More than 1,000 buyers are attending the first fur auction ever held here. In all, 678,000 skins are to be sold and their appraised value is $1,800,000. The first day's sale yesterday realized more than $300,000. It was stated that the attendance exceeded the crowd at the fur auctions in London, and Borough President Marcus M. Marks, in opening the auction, said there was no reason why New York could not become the fur center of the world. The first day's offering consisted chiefly of beaver, otter, fisher and foxes. The highest price for the day was $110 for a silver fox skin. Average prices were: Beaver, extra large, $10.85; small and medium beaver, $5.65; southern otter, $8.50; South American otter, $2.25; extra large fisher, $28.00; medium and small fisher, $15.00; wolverine, $7.00; cross fox, $16; red fox, Nos. 1 and 2, $5, and red fox, $5.35. When all other ways fail, try a Bee Want-Ad.

Boston Man Charged With Larceny of One Hundred Thousand

NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—The death of his wife, it was learned today, led directly to the arrest here of George Gray on a warrant signed by the governor of Massachusetts, charging him with the larceny of cash and securities valued at $100,000 from Fred Kensel of Chicago, and "other persons living in Massachusetts." Gray was arrested last night after having been followed by the police from an undertaking establishment to the cemetery, where Mrs. Gray was buried earlier in the day, and back to the undertaking. Gray was indicted in Boston, charged with stealing the cash and securities. He is 40 years old. Phone your Want-Ads to The Bee.
