

DIES IN POOR HOUSE AWAY FROM PETS

Recluse Had Insisted that He Be Left in Hut with His Cats and Dogs.

DIES SOON AFTER REMOVAL

Fate decreed that Gust Lampman, 65 years old, a recluse, who wanted to meet death in his hut at 4617 Lafayette avenue, surrounded by his dog, cats and pet chickens, should die in the almshouse.

Though he knew he was approaching death for several days, Lampman had refused to be taken to a hospital. Late Sunday afternoon George Tribble, Union Pacific auditor, called Superintendent Rogers of the county hospital by telephone and urged him to send for the aged man "for humanity's sake." Rogers did so and the old man arrived at the county institution at 6:30 o'clock.

Has Animal Pets.

Lampman had lived in a one-room shack for many years, having no friends other than his dog, four cats and several pet chickens.

When he was stricken by his last illness local charity workers, who learned of his condition, urged him to go to a hospital.

"No, no," was his invariable reply, "I want to die here with my pets. They are my only friends."

Sunday the old man was unconscious most of the day and it is believed he was too feeble to realize that his dumb friends were not with him when death came.

FAREWELL SERMON URGES TOLERATION

Rev. Mr. Rouse Denies Existence of Satan and Pleads for Modern Science.

HAS CRITICISM FOR BUT FEW

Rev. Frederick T. Rouse, pastor of the First Congregational church, who accepted the teachings of modern science in their application to religion; rejected the theory of a personal Satan; stood for a broad spirit of toleration, and strove to employ the methods of "Billy" Sunday for the invigoration of the church, preached his farewell sermon in Omaha yesterday morning.

"And now, my friends, my voice is silenced, by the will of some of you and the acquiescence of the others," said the minister. "I carry away no sin, or ill feeling, only the profound love and good will, I have no doubt, in a test for me—and probably for you."

Body Necessary?

"I deeply love and respect and believe in the great life and work of this church. Almost without exception they rise true, and shall ever have my love. The Pharisee and the busybody are perhaps the needed element of every flock; but the strong common sense of this lovely people can hardly go wrong and will hardly ever be stampeded. I do not see clearly your future. It is not easy, but I believe that through prayer and consecration and self-forgetfulness, and burying of your own personal desires and pet plans, you will be led out into better things than you dare now ask or think."

Rev. Mr. Rouse took as his text I Corinthians xv:1-3, beginning "Now I make known unto you the gospel which I preached unto you." He told without reservation of the gospel he had sought to preach, of which the outstanding features were the following statements:

Accepts Modern Science.

"I have regularly and consistently accepted the great trend of modern science. That an antiquated science should be taught in our schools, contradictory to the science taught in our schools is subversive of the truth.

"The love of God is as natural as the love of a mother or the light and warmth of the sun; and His revelation of Himself as natural as the revelation of the truths and wonders of electricity. This, perhaps, is my most radical and important departure from the common way of thinking and the commonly accepted mode of religious teaching.

No Single Path to Heaven.

"I believe that God reveals Himself in all religions, that Buddha drank in a decree of the life giving rock and Confucius and Socrates and Epicurus. The prayers and aims of many a non-Christian, Cornelius have come up acceptable to God.

Immortality Possible.

"I have serious doubts concerning the practical value of formal theological dogmas, often only idolatrous objects of faith. 'Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image.' A creed is a graven image.

"I believe in the personality of God, but not in the personality of Satan or evil. To exalt a great he-devil in the rival half of this universe as almost a rival of God, is a fetish worship, a devil worship and the biggest kind of idolatry.

Present Location of Church at Nineteenth and Davenport Streets Has Become Impracticable.

Rev. Mr. Rouse told the congregation the following two solutions of the removal problem exist, he said:

"Secure a new site not far from Fortieth and Dodge, or merge with St. Mary's church on a site near Fortieth and Farnam and continue the present church as an institutional work under the charge of the united church."

"Do not quote me to your new pastor," the minister advised the congregation.

The Strange Case of Mary Page

By Frederick Lewis, Author of "What Happened to Mary" :: Pictures by Essanay

Mary Page, actress, is accused of the murder of David Pollock and is defended by her lover, Philip Langdon. Pollock was discovered at Mary's trial she admits she had the revolver. Her mad testimony that Mary threatened Pollock with it previous to the murder, and that she had seen Langdon how Mary disappeared from the scene of the crime is a mystery. The police of St. Louis, who had been told by Mary's father, further evidence shows that neither of them had any temporary insanity in Mary. The defense is "repressed psychosis."

CHAPTER V. Her Father's Death.

Psychologists and those scientists who study the human brain declare that the focus of consciousness is dual, and that unless the subconscious mind supplements the conscious concentration, the attention is easily diverted. Thus a sailor steering by the North Star quivering in the fall of the Little Bear is suddenly diverted by the flashing of a meteor across the heavens, since it is only his outer consciousness that is fixed upon the star, but a whole swarm of meteors might have streaked the sky unheeded when Ulysses, life in hand, steered between Scylla and Charybdis, and all the din of the siege failed to disturb Archimedes bent over his figures in the trial for the special edition. The subconscious forces were welded into a great intensity. In like fashion, Mary Page, sitting in the prison dock with the Damoclean sword of justice above her, was now unconscious of the crowd in the courtroom. She no longer heard the boys who slipped from the reporters' table to the door carrying the news of the trial for the special edition. She no longer felt the eyes of the crowd upon her. She was even unconscious of the rustling of the papers on the prosecutor's desk, which had at first rasped her nerves so unbearably. Now mind and soul were alike concentrated upon Langdon and upon the slow building of the evidence that was to free her from the charge of having murdered David Pollock.

A tumult of old memories were surging about her as witness after witness told of the tragedy of year before (a tragedy that had no grim a sequel in the present); and yet there were strange nightmarish blanks in those memories—spaces where fact had to give place to imagination, and during which she had in the quality of uncounted moments, merging like a person under ether to momentary pain-scarred consciousness, only to sink whirling back into oblivion. And it was of these moments of which Mary herself knew only by hearsay that the witnesses were now testifying.

They were an odd contrast, these defenders of Mary. Mr. Page, slender, frail, bored with grief and anxiety; MacFibson in his rough clothes and high boots, a veritable Scotch giant with a square beard; two distinguished-looking men with the grave, kindly faces of those whose lives are spent in battling against the dual enemies of disease and mental suffering; Jeanette, Mary's maid, and all the others whose words were to shatter the great, ominous temple of accretory facts raised up by the state.

Mary did not realize the subtlety with which Langdon was calling these witnesses. In fact, it was doubtful if any of those in the courtroom except perhaps the prosecutor and the judge, appreciated the skill with which he brought out each detail in its turn. There was no confusion of facts, no forcing of a conglomerate array of evidence upon the jury; but, bit by bit, as one piece to another a jig-saw puzzle, he was fitting into a perfect picture for those present, the tragedy of the life of Mary Page.

In pursuance of his method of bringing out events as they had happened he had already, at a "bar side conference," asked permission to recall his witnesses a second, or even a third time. Thus it came as a surprise only to the spectators when Mary Page again took her place in the witness box.

She looked pitifully pale and wan, and Langdon's voice was very gentle as he said: "Mrs. Page, you told us yesterday of how your daughter, struggling with her drunken father, was struck by him and died screaming from the house. Will you tell the court, please, what followed that fight? Did you go after her or remain at home?"

"It was impossible for me to follow as quickly as Mr. Langdon did," she said quietly, glancing toward the judge. "So I stood at the gate waiting, feeling sure that it would only be a very few minutes before he would return with my poor, half-crazed girl."

"Was there anyone with you?" "At first quite a group of our neighbors were there, drawn by the sound of my daughter's screams. But they soon followed Mr. Langdon and I was left alone."

"Did you return to the house?" "I went back as far as the window," she said in some hesitation. "It—it was very cold and I wanted to get a wrap, but I—I was afraid of my husband."

"What did you see when you looked in the window?" "I saw my husband, sitting by the table still drinking. At last, however, he fell over onto the rough table, and I went in and it was as if I were in a dream, thinking to start out myself in search of Mary. As I came out of the cottage I saw Mr. Pollock drive up in his motor, and, thinking he had news of my child, I ran down the walk to him. He knew nothing of where she was, alas, but he had heard rumors of what had happened. While I was telling him about it a man, one of the men who worked near our home, came up and said that Mr. Langdon had sent him to tell me that a group of men was searching the woods for Mary and hoped soon to find her."

"Did Mr. Pollock make any comment on this?" "Yes. He said, 'My God, she'll die out there in the cold. They must be a pack

Handling Hides is Fatal to Two Men; Contract Anthrax

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Dr. C. T. Rogers of the division of industrial hygiene of the State Labor department. It was announced tonight, will require Surgeon General Rupert Blue of the United States public health service to use his influence with the Treasury department to have an order issued for the redemption of all hides shipped to America from anthrax infected ports of China and South America.

Dr. Rogers' action is based on the fact that Eugene Hiera, a hide handler of this city, is believed to be dying of anthrax at a hospital here. It is Dr. Rogers' theory that anthrax is communicated exclusively through hides and leather.

Although Hiera was operated upon Saturday afternoon for the removal of the anthrax lesion and the Richthorn serum was injected into his blood, his condition has steadily grown worse.

GROVERVILLE, N. Y., Feb. 12.—Niles Reynolds, aged 23, died early today from anthrax which he contracted last week, while working in a leather manufacturing plant here on sheep skins imported from South America. The disease was communicated through a slight skin eruption on his neck. This was the second case among workmen of the same plant within a year. The other man recovered.

British Parliament Will Open Without Accustomed Pomp

LONDON, Feb. 11.—It is understood that the government has decided to devote the entire week after Tuesday to a discussion of amendments to the royal address, which will open the way for interpellations on many matters connected with the war. After the formal opening of parliament, which for the first time since the end of Queen Victoria's reign, will not be made by the sovereign in person, and will, therefore, lack the accustomed pomp, it is expected that Premier Asquith will make one of his periodical reviews of the war. It is not unlikely that the premier's review will be largely concerned with measures contemplated for the enforcement of national economy. Once the address is voted, the government will take the whole time of the house for final business.

With regard to district restriction on imports, it is stated that the government will, in the first instance, rule that only one-third of existing imports will be permitted. It is interesting to note, in connection with the probable duration of the war, that political gossip already talks of arrangements to prolong still further the life of the present parliament, which expires at the end of September.

Skate Through the Streets of Staid Old Quaker Town

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 14.—Philadelphia's streets for several hours today resembled a vast network of frozen canals and for the first time in years it was possible to traverse the city from one end to the other on ice skates. Great throngs of skaters took advantage of the opportunity. Scores of pedestrians were injured by falling on the icy streets.

A alestorm which started early last night and continued until daybreak today was responsible for the unusual condition. "Solid ice nearly an inch thick formed in the streets and on telegraph and telephone wires. Wire communication in all directions was badly crippled, while some points in the state were entirely cut off.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Four inches of snow fell here today, and, coupled with rain, sleet and increasing cold, made walking difficult and seriously impeded traffic. Even Cross, Sick Children Love Syrup of Figs

Look at tongue! If feverish, bilious, constipated, take no chances.

"California Syrup of Figs" can't harm tender stomach, liver, bowels.

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, indigestion, diarrhoea, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit laxative," and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "mistakes" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, Mother! A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember, have your children sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup—Advertisement.

VILLA MOVES SOUTHWARD WITH ENEMIES AFTER

EL PASO, Tex., Feb. 14.—General Francisco Villa was today reported marching south with five detachments of 500 men, troops moving from various points to intercept him. A fourth force was following the railway from Maderia and a fifth was headed north from Guerrero.

To Peel Off Blotchy, Rough or Chapped Skin

To remove roughness, chaps, freckles, blotches, or any complexion difficulty, the best thing to do is to remove the skin itself. This is easily, painlessly and inexpensively done by the application of ordinary mercurized wax, procurable at any drug-store in the original one-ounce package. The wax is used by rubbing it on the skin, a little each day, gradually bringing the second layer of skin to the surface. The pores are unclogged and the face breathes in the life-giving oxygen. The new skin is beautifully soft and spotless, bearing the healthy glow of youth. Just apply the wax as you would a cosmetic cream, only not rubbing it in. In the morning wash it off with warm water. It's the most effective complexion treatment known.

To remove wrinkles it is a good plan to "soak the face" once a day for awhile in a harmless solution made by dissolving an ounce of powdered salicylic acid in a pint of witch hazel. There is nothing that will so surely erase the hateful lines.—Advertisement.

For Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

Here in America there is much suffering from catarrh and head noises. American people wrongly consider the method employed by the English to combat this insidious disease. Everyone knows how damp the English climate is and how dampness affects those suffering from catarrh. In England they treat catarrhal deafness and head noises as a constitutional disease and use an internal remedy for it that is really very effective.

Sufferers who could scarcely hear a watch tick tell how they had their hearing restored by this English treatment to such an extent that the tick of a watch was plainly audible seven and eight inches away from either ear.

Therefore, if you know someone who is troubled with catarrh, catarrhal deafness or head noises, cut out this formula and hand it to them and you will have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. The prescription can be easily prepared at home for about 75c and is made as follows:

From your druggist obtain 1 oz. of Parmentier's Double Strength about the worth. Take this home, and add to it 1/2 pint of hot water and 4 ounces of granulated sugar, stir until dissolved. Take a tablespoonful four times a day.

Parmentier is used in this way not only to reduce to some extent the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian Tube, and thus to equalize the air pressure on the drum, but to correct any excess of secretions in the middle ear, and the result is given an usually remarkably quick and effective relief. Every person who has catarrh in any form should give this recipe a trial and free themselves from this destructive disease.—Advertisement.
