

CALL ON ME TO HEAR OF TANLAC

Shooting Gallery Man Invites All Interested in The Tonic to Hear His Results.

He Wishes to Aid Sufferers

Ring, ring, ring the bell sounded in rapid succession. S. D. Rose was trying on his favorite rifle on one of the big bulls eyes in his shooting gallery.

All the boys are welcome. He will not only give them a few pointers on rifle practice, but he will "wipe" them up on the health question, which is considered the most important of all.

"I have had stomach trouble more or less for three years, but I have been much worse since two weeks before Christmas," Mr. Rose told the Tanlac man yesterday.

Tanlac satisfies sick people. It is purely vegetable and agrees with the most delicate stomach.

"Tanlac has cured me of one of the worst cases of indigestion that ever existed," stated Mr. Rose. "No one knows what I suffered but myself. I know, too, how good I feel now. Tanlac is a marvelous medicine."

"I make this statement for the benefit of the suffering people of Omaha, and I am anxious for all of the people who are interested to call on me and I will gladly tell them all about Tanlac and my recovery."

Tanlac is being specially introduced at the drug store of Sherman & McConnell in Omaha by the Tanlac man, who explains its uses and makes known the results that may be expected.

Tanlac may be obtained in the following cities: Ashland, Conn's Pharmacy; Blue Springs, B. N. Wonder; Benson, Schiller-Beattie Pharmacy; Central City, Schiller Drug Store; Grand Island, Clayton's Pharmacy; Weeping Water, Meyer Drug Store—Advertisement.

M'CLANAHAN RAPS BROTHER MEDICOS

Says Medical Profession is at Fault Because Mothers Do Not Nurse Their Babies.

BOTTLE INJURES THE HEALTH

"The medical profession is at fault because more mothers do not nurse their babies at the breast," Dr. H. M. McClanahan told an audience of Omaha mothers in a lecture at the Boyd theater.

He declared that nine out of ten mothers were willing to nurse their babies at the breast and it was in most cases the fault of their medical advisers that they did not.

"It is the medical profession, not the mothers of America, to be blamed for this state of affairs."

"It is a great fallacy that babies have as good chances of living when nursed by the bottle as at the breast," asserted Dr. McClanahan.

"There is only one reason," he continued, "why a mother shouldn't nurse her baby at the breast. That reason is her health."

"I believe there is a day coming when the men of this country will not consent to their wives becoming mothers unless the baby can be nursed at the breast."

Another Prevailing Fallacy. "Another fallacy prevailing in the mind of the average person is that, next to the mother's milk, cow's milk is the best for babies.

"The reason we don't have goat's milk as a general thing is because the raising of goats for dairy purposes does not pay."

"If there was enough money in it, there would be plenty of dealers in goat's milk."

Dr. McClanahan was introduced by Mrs. K. R. J. Edholm.

Pleads Own Case in a Suit Against the Street Car Company

Attilla Randolph, who says he is an assistant ambassador of the Lord, scores the services of attorneys in his $10,000 damage suit now on trial before Judge Redick in district court.

When he appeared before the court alone, permission was granted him to plead his own case, which he did quite successfully.

Randolph was put off street cars when he attempted to distribute a religious paper to the passengers, and though he admits no violence was shown and his money was returned, he asks damages for mental anguish and humiliation suffered.

YOUR SHARE OF THE BANK DEPOSITS IS ABOUT $600

"Have you $600 in the savings bank or building and loan company?" If not, you are below the average Omaha saving citizen in thrift.

The average person in Omaha has about that amount saved up, according to figures that are being compiled by the bureau of publicity of the Commercial club.

The figures are not complete, but the preliminary report shows that a very large percentage of Omaha's citizens are savers, and that the savings of these will average nearly $600 per capita.

School Board Now Knows Solution of Speaking Problem

Warning to the public: Don't be surprised if members of the Board of Education should suddenly display unusual declamatory and recitative abilities.

A concern in Atlantic City has offered to supply the school officials, speeches, addresses, short talks for the dinner or breakfast table, or articles for any occasion and on any subject.

Dr. E. Holvethelmer believes this service would be helpful in times of need. He is wondering if the board could get club rates.

The Strange Case of Mary Page

By Frederick Lewis, Author of "What Happened to Mary" :: Pictures by Essanay

(Copyright, 1915, by McClure Publications) SYNOPSIS.

Mary Page, actress, is accused of the murder of David Pollock and is defended by her lover, Philip Langdon. Pollock was intoxicated. At Mary's trial she admits she had the revolver. Her main testimony that she threatened Pollock with it previously, and Mary's leading man implicates Langdon. How Mary disappeared from the scene of the crime is a mystery. Brandon tells of a strange hand print he saw on Mary's shoulder. Further evidence shows that Pollock had been suffering from temporary insanity in Mary. The defense is "repressed psychosis." Witnesses described Mary's flight from her intoxicated father and her father's suicide. Nurse Walton describes the kidnapping of Mary. Pollock and Amy Barton tells of Mary's struggles to become an actress, of Pollock's pursuit of her, and of another occasion when a swell of liquor drove Mary insane.

CHAPTER IX. A New Case.

Nature with her prodigal creativeness sends every human being into the world differing in some fashion from his fellow men and women; not merely in features, but in emotions and character. Yet taken in the aggregate all these contrasting personalities may be eyed as one man. They may be played upon like an instrument and roused to blind anger; to fearful sympathy and even to panic, and therein lies the secret of what scientists term "mass psychology," the blessing and equally the bane of the lawyer in the court room.

It was not merely sympathy for Mary that swayed the crowd on this particular morning however; it was expectancy—a psychic sense of something impending—and there was a whisper that might have been excitement or a mere composite. "I told you," when Langdon, a bundle of papers, in his hand, stepped forward and addressed the court.

"our honor and gentlemen of the jury," he said quietly, "it had been my intention to call upon Mr. Daniels, manager of the defendant, as my next witness. But—he seemed dramatically—"Mr. Daniels has disappeared! And in searching for him such important facts have come to light that I crave the indulgence of the court to recall some former witnesses in order to introduce fresh testimony for the defense. It has been learned that, unknown to Miss Page, David Pollock supplied the money to back 'The Bookers,' in which the defendant was starred, and there are such suspicious features connected with the partnership of Daniels and Pollock that I—"

"I object," interrupted the District attorney hotly, leaping to his feet. "If there are suspicious features or new facts let Mr. Langdon introduce them as testimony. Your Honor, this is a palpable effort on the part of my learned opponent to mislead the jury and to subtly direct evidence against a man who is 'missing' and cannot defend himself."

"On the contrary," stormed Langdon. "I stand ready to bring out each one of these facts in the testimony of my witnesses. I was merely anticipating the very natural query of your Honor, 'Why not call Mr. Daniels himself by explaining the situation?'"

"In that case," said the judge quietly, "the court will sustain you. But I think it advisable for you simply to call such witnesses as you have, in order that the proceedings may not be delayed."

Langdon turned to the bailiff with a smile of satisfaction.

"Call George Brennan," he said, and flashed a look of encouragement at Mary, whose eyes had opened wide in amazement at his speech, an amazement that was, however, tinged with the first dawn of a real hope.

It didn't need the question as to his occupation to tell the spectators that the new witness was a detective. It was somehow written all over his clean-shaven, square-jawed face.

"Mr. Brennan," said Langdon, when the witness had given his age as 30 and his state as unmarried, "will you please tell the court the result of your investigation into the disappearance of William Daniels, following your failure to serve subpoena upon him?"

"I called at the Daniels apartment," said the detective quietly, "Mr. Langdon's request. He wanted Mr. Daniels as a witness and also wanted him to call at his (Mr. Langdon's) office before coming into court."

"Who was in the apartment when you called?"

"Mrs. Daniels and her daughter, a young girl of 16 or 17."

"Did you notice anything unusual in their behavior?"

"Well, I don't know as I'd call it unusual, sir, in the circumstances, but they were terribly upset. Mrs. Daniels said that her husband had gone out two days before and nobody had seen him since."

"Had she no inkling of his whereabouts?"

"No. She said he had left as usual to go to his office in the Covington theater and that was the last they had seen of him. Then I asked her if she had noticed the police, and when she said, 'No,' I told her I was a detective, and had come seeking her husband as a witness in this trial. She said that he couldn't tell anything, she was sure, but that the murder of David Pollock had killed him too. 'I'm sure that it's just the murder and the trial that have driven him away,' she said. 'He's been almost insane ever since it happened.' With the help of Mrs. Daniels and the daughter I went through his papers there at the house, and then Mrs. Daniels and I went to the theater and got the watchman to open his office."
