

HUGHES REPLIES TO McADOO AND BAKER

Nominee Repeats What He Would Have Done in the Lusitania Case.

CLOSE OF THIRD TOUR

Youngstown, O., Oct. 20.—Charles E. Hughes, reiterating that he meant what he said in Louisville the other night about the course he would have followed with reference to the Lusitania, tonight replied to a recent utterance of Secretary McAdoo, with the declaration that apparently it seemed impossible to the administration that one could mean what he said.

"Now rises the secretary of the treasury to complain that this was not a statement of what I would have done, had the sinking occurred," Mr. Hughes said, after reiterating that he would have stated his position "unequivocally" in advance of the sinking.

"I was under the impression that when I said what I would have stated in advance as to what I would do, everyone would know that I stated what, in fact, I would have done in the described event. The secretary's remarks shows in an illuminating way this administration's conception of the value of words.

Means What He Says.

"It apparently seems impossible to this administration that one can mean what he says. That is its difficulty. With it, a threat of action does not seem to mean anything but words. My position is somewhat different. I mean what I say and because this would have been well known and we should already have had a reputation for correct policies, I repeat that the Lusitania would not have been sunk."

Mr. Hughes spoke before an audience in the theater here. He also replied to a statement attributed to Secretary War Baker in a recent speech, in which Washington's soldiers in the march to Valley Forge in the days of the American revolution, were said to be just as bad characters as the Mexicans.

"I never supposed the day would come," Mr. Hughes said, "when the representative of the American government would say that about those who gave us our liberties."

Americans Should Blush.

After quoting the statement attributed to Secretary Baker, Mr. Hughes read from Secretary Lansing's description in June last of the atrocities in Mexico, contained in a note to the de facto government of Mexico. Mr. Lansing's recital of the civil strife in Mexico, with its attendant loss of American life and destruction of American property, and that portion of the note relating to the Santa Ysabel massacre, were read by Mr. Hughes verbatim.

"An administration imbued with the spirit of true Americanism," Mr. Hughes said, "would be incapable of this statement attributed to the secretary of war. It must bring the blush of shame to the cheek of every American that apologizes for the deplorable record in Mexico should be made after this fashion."

Back to New York.

Mr. Hughes' speech here tonight was the last of his third presidential campaign trip. He left here at 11 p. m. for New York, where he is due tomorrow afternoon. The day was spent traveling, with three short addresses, at Bay City, Saginaw and Flint, Mich. It was raining and the damp weather affected the nominee's voice.

In his speech here tonight Mr. Hughes said:

"The president of the United States is the trustee of executive power. Placed in control of our agencies of international intercourse, he is the guardian of the rights of the American citizen. He has no authority to surrender them; no right to impair them. Upon his firmness in maintaining that depends our security and our peace. The democratic platform four years ago promised that the constitutional rights of American citizens should protect them on our borders and go with them throughout the world. When it promised full protection for American lives and property abroad it stated an established American principle.

Rights of Citizens.

"One of America's greatest jurists, speaking for the supreme court of the United States, said many years ago: 'Another privilege of a citizen of the United States is to demand the care and protection of the federal government over his life, liberty and property when on the high seas or within the jurisdiction of a foreign government.'

"Now, we are told that the administration has turned its back on the American doctrine of full protection. That is what its leading apologist finds its record in Mexico to mean. It is a reversal without authority and in violation of the specific pledge upon which it was elected. Instead of following its clear line of duty, it engaged in a personal, vindictive war, leaving the lives and property of our citizens to be destroyed.

Direct Effect of Policy.

"This deplorable condition destroyed our international prestige. When the administration did speak for American rights, its words were not taken seriously. It had made its reputation.

"As a result we have destruction of American lives and property and interference with American commerce which could have been prevented. The executive has many resources at his command and he can protect our known rights without war.

"Recently, we have had illuminating utterances from two of the most important spokesmen of the administration—two cabinet ministers.

"The secretary of the treasury finds fault with my answer to the question out to me the other night at Louisville about the sinking of the Lusitania. He says that I did not say what I would have done after the sinking. You may recall that I stated specifically the position I would have taken in advance and the notice I would have given of the action I should take; and I added that with this position unequivocally stated in advance, and backed by a convincing administration record, the ship would not have been sunk. "Now rises the secretary of the treasury to complain that this was not a statement of what I would have done, had, nevertheless, the sinking occurred. But, I was under the impression that when I said I would have stated in advance as to what I would do, everyone would know that I stated what, in fact, I would have done in the described event. The secretary's remark shows in an illuminating way this administration's conception of the status of words. It apparently seems impossible to this administration that one can mean what he says. That is its difficulty. With it a threat of action does not seem to mean anything but words. My position is somewhat different. I mean what I say and because this would have been well known and we should already have had a reputation for firm and correct policies, I repeat that the Lusitania would not have been sunk.

Baker's Astonishing Statement.

"But the most remarkable exhibition of the administration is the recent statement of the secretary of war. He is reported to have said—and I do not understand that he has denied the statement as reported—I know that the Mexicans do not respect American life and property; I know that they are ragamuffins; that they desecrate church property; that their money is no good and that they are generally worthless. But people never respect these things in revolutions. We did not respect them in our civil war. Washington's soldiers in the march to Valley Forge stole everything they could get their hands on, took the silver vessels out of the churches and sold them to buy drink. They drove the ministers out of the churches. Their money was worthless and they were just as bad characters as the Mexicans.

Now let me read a part of the secretary of state's description in June last of the atrocities in Mexico.

Torn With Civil Strife.

"For three years the Mexican republic has been torn with civil strife. The lives of Americans and other aliens have been sacrificed. Vast properties developed by American capital and enterprise have been destroyed or rendered non-productive. Bandits have been permitted to roam at will through the territory contiguous to the United States and to seize, without punishment or without effective attempt at punishment, the property of Americans, while lives of citizens of the United States who ventured to remain their territory or to remain their property have been taken and in some cases barbarously taken and the murderers have never been apprehended or brought to justice."

"It would be tedious to recount instance after instance, outrage after outrage, atrocity after atrocity, to illustrate the true nature and extent of the widespread conditions of lawlessness and violence characterized by ruthless brutality. But uncivilized acts of mutilation were perpetrated."

"Meanwhile a party of unfortunate American citizens started by train from Chihuahua City to visit the Cuernavaca after having received assurances from the Carranzista authorities in the state of Chihuahua that the country was safe, and that a guard on the train was not necessary. The Americans held passports or safe conducts issued by authorities of the de facto government. January 10, the train was stopped by Villa bandits and eighteen of the American party were stripped of their clothing and shot in cold blood, in what is known as the Santa Ysabel massacre."

"Within a month of this barbarous slaughter of American citizens it was a notorious fact that Villa was then within twenty miles of Cuernavaca and publicly stated that his purpose was to destroy American lives and property."

Villa's unhindered activities culminated in the unprovoked and cold-blooded attack upon American soldiers and citizens in the town of Columbus on the night of March 9, the details of which do not need to be repeated here in order to refresh

STRAUS INDIGNANT AT INSULT TO JEWS

New York Leader Resents Effort to Induce Them to Pay Wilson by Votes. MUST ACT AS AMERICANS

New York, Oct. 20.—(Special Telegram.)—Hon. Oscar S. Straus, chairman of the Public Service commission of New York, progressive candidate for governor of New York in 1912, secretary of commerce and labor in President Roosevelt's administration, and minister to Turkey during the Cleveland administration, vigorously protested against the appeal of the Jews of America by Henry Morganthau, under the leadership of Henry Morganthau, are asking Jews to support Mr. Wilson because he appointed members of their faith to high office, describing it as "an insult to the intelligence and patriotism of his coreligionists."

Unpatriotic Appeal.

"Last month a most unpatriotic and un-American appeal was issued to the Jews of America by Henry Morganthau, in behalf of President Wilson," said Mr. Straus (this evening at a meeting which he addressed.

Together with a number of my coreligionists of all shades of political affiliations, we issued a statement to Americans of Jewish faith, resenting this sectarian or group appeal as an insult to the intelligence and the un-failing patriotism of American Jews, from the beginning of our government to the present time." He declared that every president had done justice by the Jews, but that no president should stoop to asking them to pay for the protection and recognition which they as Americans were entitled, by either votes or campaign contributions. "It is an insult to you, my fellow citizens," declared Mr. Straus, "to assume that you will vote as Jews and not as Americans. Jews have never voted in groups, and I hope the time will never come when my coreligionists in this country will so forget their Americanism as to cast a group vote."
