The attendance was a disappointment. Only about 18,000 persons attended. Only about 18,000 persons attended.

A shudder ran through the stands when Tom Alley turned over. His spill was in full view of the entire grandstand and most of the infield. He and Salmon could be plainly seen when they were catapulted from the car. Happening on the very first lap, some of the speed enthusiasts feared for subsequent happenings, but none of the other drivers had any difficulty at all.

Louis Charrolet was the original hards. Louis Chevrolet was the original hard-luck victim. First his car, while leading, went bad. Then Kirkpatrick, leading in Louis' other Frontenac, fell out, and Louis himself had to quit again in the fifty-mile race with engine trouble. If luck had been with him, Chevrolet would have won both races and Kirkpatrick would have been second in the main event.
