Stricken Blind By Sniper's Bullet British Sergeant Major Holds His Men Together for Week Until "Tommies" Bring Relief

Secretary of Blind Relief Fund for Soldiers Tells Story of Heroic Action of "Non-Com."

By MRS. R. V. WEBSTER, Secretary of the American-British-French-Belgian Permanent Blind Relief War Fund for Soldiers and Sailors, New York.

London, July 12.—It was the noise of the fowls that attracted my attention to him. A clean cut, athletic, good-looking chap, he stood in the midst of them in a wire fenced enclosure with a rake under his arm, whistling cheerily. Now and then he interrupted his tune and "chuck-chuck-chucked" at the birds as he plucked his bare arm into a canvas bag and scattered the feed about him. Now and then also he stopped to laugh as one more venturesome and more impatient than the rest flew up to his hand and fluttered back among the greedy flock that were cackling, scratching and pecking at one another with strident cries as frantically they darted about—many scores of them—and quarreled over the manna that fell so bountifully on every side.

"Na poo!" he announced finally, and moved towards the gate on which I was leaning watching the scene with languid interest. He flung the empty bag over his arm and came toward me, filling his pipe and "shooting" his feathered friends as they scattered before him and followed him, cackling for more, after the manner of their insatiable kind. Stopping for a moment to apply a match to the tobacco, he opened the gate, closed it behind him carefully—and walked right into me where I had drawn aside to let him pass.

"Yes, ma'am. At your service," he answered simply.

Everybody, even visitors, in the vicinity of the Buckinghamshire village, knew of Sergeant Major Tomlinson, for he was the lion of the community. The particular exploit, one of many, which had won for him the Victoria Cross, was common history—his wife, who was prouder of him than anybody else, had seen to that. Tomlinson himself could never be induced to talk of it.

It is an unwritten code among the British soldiers, rigidly observed, never to discuss such things on pain of the ridicule and contempt of their comrades. But it was a matter of record that his battalion in the great push on the Somme, having been reduced to a scant company by a machine gun nest in Devil's Wood, had finally cleared it out with a bayonet charge only to find that in the ebb and flow of the battle they had been cut off. Not a commissioned officer had been left, and Tomlinson, rallying the survivors, many of whom were wounded, had held out for seven days against terrible odds and exhaustion from lack of food and water, and taken fearful toll of the enemy, until the tide had turned again and a sea of khaki had swept in upon and around them. Tomlinson, who three days before had been wounded in the head by a sniper's bullet, had then collapsed and when the stretcher bearers appeared upon the scene his fellow heroes learned to their amazement that he was blind. The bullet had cut the optic nerve of the right eye and the other eye had become affected in sympathy. How with their first aid bandages swathed around his head could they have known? He had never said a word about it, but suffering himself the torments of the inferno had continued to keep up the spirits of his men and direct the defense.

Looking at him now I could hardly believe he was blind. His eyes were the calm gray eyes of the English, and they seemed to gaze full upon me. At first glance no one would have suspected that they were sightless, especially as the illusion was heightened by his firmness of step and sureness of movement.

I told him that I belonged to the A. B. F. B. Permanent Blind Relief War fund and won his interest inconspicuously. Again the red flush suffused his face deeply bronzed by long soldiering in India and in the trenches of France, and it took on an expression of animation that seemed to transform him.

"Do you, though by jove, that's fine!" he said warmly. "Your American people are splendid and I have often wished that I could thank somebody for what your society has done for me—for us. Won't you come over to the house and meet my wife and have a cup of tea with us? She's a great little woman and will be delighted to see you."

I declined. "Tell me about your-

God, is taking her place in the firing line, you will have many of your poor fellows on your hands in the same pickle I was in and your A. B. F. B. will have all its work cut out."

He bade me a cheery good evening and started off with the assured tread of one who knew his way perfectly, using his rake as a staff.

Missing Fremont Girl Is Found at Morse Bluffs

Fremont, Neb., Aug. 4.—(Special Telegram.)—Mabel Garrison, the 15-year-old girl, who disappeared Monday, after she had been sent to the police station to report an attempt to kidnap her, was located at Morse Bluffs, and brought to Fremont by Chief of Police J. A. Welton.

The girl said she started out to walk to Morse Bluffs, where she applied for work at a hotel. She was given a ride by a farmer and taken to his home, where she had dinner. She then went to the home of the farmer's sister, Mrs. John Janovec, where she remained for three days and nights and then walked to Morse Bluffs.

She said that she was picked up and placed in an automobile Sunday evening by two men who prevented her calling for help by holding their hands over her mouth. Police officers are looking for a man with whom Mabel said she was walking when forced into the automobile.

He offered his services to the government in the medical reserve corps in April, shortly after war was declared. Although he does not know where he will be stationed for duty, it is probable that his work will take him to some base hospital on the front. He leaves West Point on Sunday for Kansas. His going into this service marks the entrance of the third from his family—his two sons and himself. One of his sons has enlisted, the other has been at the West Point Military academy for two years.

ASSASSINS OF KING AND QUEEN ARE SHOT

Deed Committed Fifteen Years Ago is Finally Squared in a Dramatic Manner by the New Regime.

(Correspondence of The Associated Press.) Corfu, Island of Corfu, July 10.—Fate has at last fallen on that band of military regicides who some fifteen years ago broke into the royal palace at Belgrade at night and assassinated King Alexander and the Serbian queen, Draga.

Three high officers have recently been shot after military court-martial. Three more are awaiting death sentence, seven officers, including a general, have received life sentences and some thirty officers have received lesser sentences of from one to five years.

While the outside world was shocked, the band of assassins enjoyed at home a certain immunity and even glory for having rid the country of a dissolute ruler and his plebeian gypsy queen, for the name of Draga had been well known in the concert halls of Emolu before she had the luck to win a king and crown.

The murder clique remained in control of the army until after the present war, when Prince Alexander became regent, owing to the age of King Peter. One of his first acts was to restore to active service a great number of officers retired by the murder clique. This resulted in the clique plotting his death, but the conspiracy was discovered.

More than forty high officers were tried as a result of the conspiracy.
