Beans Furnish Valuable Food for Farm Stock

(From a Staff Correspondent.) Lincoln, Oct. 31 .- (Special.) - Neoraska farmers who raised a crop of beans this year may not know they have at hand valuable feed for hores, cattle and sheep, according to Dean E. A. Burnett of the College of Agriculture. The bean crop is a leguminous crop and straw can be used as a substitue for alfalfa hay or clover. The threshing, of course, destroys some of the leaves and finer particles, but these can be used by cattle or sheep if they are saved. The pods are woody and will be wasted to a considerable extent, but furnish valuable feed.
