

TO PUT VALUATION ON CITY CAR LINES

City Council Requests the State Railway Commission to Report on Property.

The city council adopted a resolution requesting the State Railway commission to make a physical valuation of the lines and other properties of the Omaha & Council Bluffs Street Railway company. This information is necessary in connection with three suits pending in district and federal courts between the city and the traction company. One suit relates to franchise rights and the others to rates of fare. "I understand that the railway commissioners have expressed a willingness to make this valuation if the city council would send a formal request," explained Corporation Counsel Lambert, who has charge of the suits started by the city against the street railway company. It would cost the city many thousands of dollars to make this valuation, as experts would have to be engaged. The State Railway commission has an organization for this class of work. The corporation counsel stated that on one occasion the street railway company officials placed a valuation of $29,000,000 on their properties in Omaha.

Topographic Map of Omaha Being Made for Soldiers

An area of 300 square miles, comprising Omaha and surrounding territory, is being surveyed and mapped for use by attendants of the balloon school at Fort Omaha. Charles E. Cooke, topographic engineer of the United States Geological survey, has opened an office in room 406 city hall. He will have a staff of 30 field and office men on the job within a week and the force probably will be increased to 50. These men will be here for eight weeks. Field men are now at work on the preliminary charting of distance and elevations. The maps will show roads, trees, bodies of water, buildings and other physical features with accurate distances from Fort Omaha and intermediate distances. With one of these maps before him, the observer in a balloon will be able to determine distances and discern objects.

"Bluejackets from Nebraska hold reunion November 22. During the evening telegrams will be read from home. May we depend on you for support? Also notify Rotary club, Commercial club and Ak-Sar-Ben. Have newspapers notify towns to send telegraphic greetings. Help us boost Nebraska," was the text of the message. Shirley was a student at High School of Commerce before he entered the navy.
