OMAHA WOMEN DRESS TOO WELL NOWADAYS

Prof. Keen Says They Are Charming and Dainty, But Don't Economize in War Time.

In these war times it is stylish to be old-fashioned, according to Arthur Keen of San Francisco. "Our women, renowned for their style and beauty, are wearing their old clothes—and they boast of it," said Mr. Keen.

The San Franciscan is devoting his time to war time economy. He is making a tour of the large cities of the United States to study economic conditions, and is stopping at the Paxton hotel while he is making a quiet study of the habits of the people of Omaha.

"Your women spend too much for new clothes," was the first comment the inspector made to The Bee reporter who interviewed him. "They are altogether too well dressed, and it does not speak well for them. It is hard to censure them, for they are charming in their dainty boots and velvet coats and rich furs—but the times demand a sterner and more worthwhile kind of charm."

Mr. Keen was professor of economics at Leland Stanford, jr. university, Palo Alto, Cal., but he gave up his job to try to help the government in the war economy work. He is giving his services without pay.

Y. M. C. A. Campaign in State Doubles Nebraska Quota

The recent war work fund campaign put Nebraska on the Young Men's Christian association map nationally. This state, asked to raise $250,000, actually went far over the $500,000 mark. No other state has been reported as equalling this amount in proportion to its quota.

"I knew Nebraska could do it, and I knew we had the staunch friends throughout the state who would help by giving their time and energy," said C. A. Musselman, state Young Men's Christian association secretary. "I expected it would reach $300,000, but it was—and still am—surprised to realize we went over $500,000."

POLISH PATRIOTS DELIVER SPEECHES

South Siders in Great Number Attend Meeting to Recruit Army From This One Nationality.

Patriotism and fraternal spirit among their countrymen prevailed at the Polish recruiting rally which took place at the South Side High school auditorium Saturday.

The hall was crowded with Polish settlers of the South Side, who, imbued with loyalty and patriotism for the country they are living in and fighting for, listened attentively to the speakers. Frequent applause greeted the words of the speakers.

John L. Kennedy, during the course of his address, said: "The United States aims to give freedom to Poland and all oppressed nations of Europe. In order to accomplish our aims, we must recruit our army to forces that will bring about victory for us."

The audience became intensely interested in the persons of Major General Wacław Gasiorowski and his companion officer, Lieutenant W. Szaniawski, member of the Polish army in France, who are on a recruiting mission in the United States, under the auspices of the French government, when they appeared before them dressed in the full regalia of their office and spoke in Polish.

They are here to aid in recruiting the Omaha contingent to the autonomous Polish army. They told of the aid the French government has given to the formation of the new Polish army and said that 40,000 men will take part in the spring campaign, fighting under Poland's maroon flag with its white eagles. Both men are optimistic over the outcome of the war and say that Poland will look to America for counsel in establishing the new Polish republic.

C. O. Lobeck and Captain G. W. C. Whiting of the 41st regiment, Company M, stationed at Fort Crook, were present, as were also Lieutenants Porter Wiggins and Ralph Fingerson of Company M.

All members of Company M attended the mass meeting. Lieutenant Joseph Hoffman spoke a word to the assembly. The band of the Polish Falcon alliance escorted the speakers to the school building and furnished a musical program at the meeting.

Plenty of Turkeys, But Prices Are Higher

Turkey will be plentiful in Omaha Thanksgiving day, but prices will be higher than those of last year. "We expect turkeys to sell from 30 to 35 cents a pound for fresh, country-dressed birds," said B. A. Simon of the Washington market. "We are getting in large shipments from western Nebraska, where we have seven men traveling, buying the turkeys direct from the farmers. Some are shipped to Omaha alive and some dressed, according to the distance. Last year turkeys sold for 25 to 28 cents a pound. These are all dry-picked, fresh, country-dressed birds."

Local dealers say the price of turkeys is governed largely by the weather of the three or four days preceding a holiday like Thanksgiving day. If the weather is warm the prices are comparatively low. If the weather is cold the prices go higher.

This year, it is said, the price of turkeys and other poultry should be extraordinarily low because of the careful scrutiny the federal and state food administrators are giving to the cold storage proposition. It will not be as easy as in former years for speculators to put away thousands of pounds of turkeys, geese, ducks and chickens in cold storage. This fact may result in a great supply of the birds, freshly dressed, which must be thrown on the market and disposed of for whatever prices can be secured.

At the present time turkeys are selling on the downtown markets at 30 to 35 cents a pound, ducks at 24 cents and chickens from 20 to 24 cents a pound.

ST. AGNES PARISH PLANS FESTIVAL

Money Will Be Used to Build New Convent for School; Special Nights Are Designated.

The four-day fall festival given by the people of St. Agnes' parish will begin Monday night. A ton of coal will be given away each night. The festival will be held in the old Independent Building, Twenty-fifth and M streets. There will be many booths in charge of the women of the parish.

Rev. Father Ahern, pastor of St. Agnes, and his people have been planning this festival for a long time. The money which is raised will be used to build a new convent beside St. Agnes' school.

A special invitation has been issued to the mayor and the city officials to attend Monday evening, which has been designated as pioneers' night. Tuesday will be Ancient Order of Hibernians' night and Wednesday will be the Knights of Columbus' night; Thursday, Thanksgiving night, will be a general jubilee.

St. Agnes' church and school were established 28 years ago, during which time 300 to 400 children have been educated each year. The cost of this education has been borne by the parents of the scholars at a saving of more than $400,000 to the general public. During all of these years the sisters in charge of the school have lived in meager quarters. The people of the parish hope to raise money to build a suitable building close to the school for the sisters.
