Six Hundred Employees Make Complaint That Discrimination Is Made by Foremen Against Union Men.

Resolutions condemning the inefficiency of foremen over employees and poor working conditions at the Union Pacific shops, were drawn up by 600 employees of the shops who met in joint session Friday night in the Labor Temple, Sixteenth and Capitol avenue.

Representatives of the various local organizations of boilermakers, pipemen, electricians, mechanics, blacksmiths, carmen and sheet metal workers, were present and voiced criticism of labor conditions of the shops, declaring that "discrimination is being evidenced constantly against union men."

F. M. Wagnan, representing the "mechanics' union, said: "Some of our foremen, who are appointed from other shops, disregard efficiency of work altogether among the employees. Particularly, they discriminate against us union men. We are organized for our own welfare. We have absolutely no grievance concerning wages; all we demand is better working conditions and a chance to forge ahead for promotions."

Men Show Patriotism.

Bernard Carvello, secretary of the boiler-makers' union, was chairman of the meeting. He said: "We have shown our spirit in the shops by following the orders of our foremen to the letter. We have worked overtime without murmur; our patriotism in response to the Liberty loan and war savings stamp drives has been unequalled, in proportion to our numbers; we are responding willingly to the call of the army and navy. Now, we ask fair play concerning our demands."

F. L. Behm, head of the mechanics' union, said: "Our object is to obtain higher efficiency in our work, while in turn we ask our employers to regard our competency and recognize our unions."

A committee was named to meet in conference with the officials of the shops with the object of arriving at a settlement. Another meeting is scheduled to be held Monday night in the Labor Temple.

while on his way home from Africa, that Roosevelt dropped in at a few of the European capitals. He called on Kaiser Wilhelm in Berlin and reviewed some of the Huns and during the last year the colonel has had a strong desire to review those Hohenzollern troops again.

Teddy was in Omaha for a few hours on an afternoon in April, 1903. He was on his way to Keokuk to join a party of governors in a trip down the Mississippi river in connection with inland waterway improvements. On that occasion he was driven up town through lanes of cheering Nebraskans. In his honor a salute was fired from an old cannon

Court House Employee Asks That He Be Placed in Draft Contingent

Sidney J. Gottneid, journal clerk in the office of the clerk of the district court, where he has been employed for the last seven years, filed a request, which was granted, with the local exemption board, that he be placed in the draft contingent, which will leave Omaha June 24. Gottneid's place in the draft would not require his service for nearly a year.

He is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Gottneid, 2729 South Twenty-third street. He was born in Omaha.

Here in 1900.

Colonel Roosevelt was here in 1900, at the close of a strenuous campaign, when "McKinley and Roosevelt" were words which reverberated throughout the land. Roosevelt's vigorous personality impressed Omahan's on that occasion.

"The many-sided Roosevelt," as he has been referred to, expressed a liking for the west as long ago as 1883 when he acquired ranch lands in South Dakota. One of the legends of Medora, S. D., relates to an occasion 35 years ago when the former president, then a comparatively young man, "came to town" and was looked upon as a tenderfoot. The old guard of the hills brought out a broncho known as "White-faced Kid," and stood around while Roosevelt cultivated an acquaintance with the cayuse. The critter had thrown "Hellowing Bill Jones" more than once and expectations were that Roosevelt would be picked up in pieces. The colonel, however, negotiated the animal and after that, he was "ace high" with the hillsmen.

That Boxing Incident.

Omaha remembers when Colonel Roosevelt introduced boxing at the White House and suffered dislocation of an eye when an opponent landed on his optic, and Omaha remembers that he advocated national preparedness for this country at the beginning of the European war.

The west has read that Roosevelt is: "A fine, brave, hearty, honest, manly fellow, trained in many schools of life, absolutely democratic, absolutely American, ambitious with a high ambition and having a singular gift for inspiring a personal liking or disliking, as the case may be. There is nothing of the dummy or wax figure about him."

The man who popularized the strenuous life has requested that his visit to Omaha this week shall be "quiet." That is his usual request, because it may be that when the train arrives he will be absorbed in a book or writing an article and may not be in the mood to be disturbed. But as a rule when that committee explains to him that Omaha insists in extending the strong hand of western hospitality, he will smile (remember that smile) and will acquiesce in the arrangements.

He may go up in one of the balloons at Fort Omaha. He has faced an angry rhinoceros and an enraged lion in Africa and there is no telling what T. R. is going to do next.

Soldiers in the home cantonments, the announcement said, use Young Men's Christian association letter-heads at the rate of 12,000,000 a week. Aside from furnishing free paper and envelopes to American soldiers and

More Light---Less Heat

The evenings are a bit warm, you may think—but presently they will be hot, and in Nebraska, during July and August, hot is spelled in capital letters, too!

About the living room table, or while you are dining, or when you attempt that greatest luxury of all—reading in bed—you may find that the lighting produces so much additional heat that the discomfort is more than you can bear.

There is no reason why the pleasure of summer evenings at home should be spoiled by incorrect lighting—for any lighting that produces excessive heat is incorrect, which Your Electric Service Company is prepared to prove.

The modern Mazda Electric Lamp represents the very pinnacle of progress and development in that line—and one of its features is a greatly lessened heat unit coupled with much brighter and yet softer light.

As we have often endeavored to impress upon the users of electricity for house lighting, it is necessary that a Mazda lamp, designed to be used with a certain voltage, Be Used Only With That Voltage!

If the voltage is too high or too-low for a particular lamp, that lamp will give less light or will use more current or will last a shorter period than in case the adjustment has been perfect.

Our skilled sales force on the main floor of the new Electric Building, Fifteenth and Farnam Streets, is prepared to demonstrate every known variety of Mazda Lamp, while our Service Department will assure you the proper lamp for the voltage furnished in your home.

This will help you solve the excessive heat problem during the summer months—a problem which will become more serious as the weeks roll by.
