Red Cross Benefit Play

A number of little girls staged a surprise play Saturday evening, and without the knowledge of their mothers rehearsed their play, secured the costumes and sold $10.60 worth of tickets. The play was to be presented on the lawn of the A. V. Shotwell home, and imagine Mrs. Shotwell's surprise when she saw the audience approaching, out of a clear sky, as it were. The playlet, "The Magic Sword," was received very enthusiastically, and the youthful actresses feel very proud that they could contribute to the Red Cross. The little girls are:

Misses— Hazel Evans, Ruth Shotwell, Alice Bromwell, Grace Lomon, Arline Kunz.

Wedding In Hostess House.

Mrs. Charles E. Johannes, the "good angel" of the boys, at Camp Pike, Arkansas, as hostess of the Hostess House was matron of honor at a military wedding which took place before the broad fireplace in the living room, shortly before her return to Omaha for the summer.

Bride and Sister of Ministers.

Mrs. Katherine Sawtell and Rev. B. P. Van Der Lippe were married quietly at the home of the bride on Monday evening. The Rev. A. J. McClung, brother of the bride, performed the ceremony.

After July 1 the bridal couple will be at home at 4334 Lake street. Mr. Van Der Lippe is pastor of the Clifton Hill Presbyterian church.

Mrs. Milton Newman, president of the organization, spent Monday and Tuesday canvassing the aid of the children of the Park school, who have promised to work for local charities through the guild.

Mother's Day Letter From Omahan in France

One of the first Mothers' day letters received in Omaha from France was one written by Harry Sigwart of the 13th railway engineers to his mother, Mrs. A. T. Sigwart, 1254 Park Wilde avenue. An interesting Mothers' day booklet, issued by the American Young Men's Christian association in France, accompanied this letter.

My Dear Mother, This is Mother's day and General Pershing has issued orders for every one to write home and that the letters will be given preference over all other mail, so I am writing you to tell you everything is just fine with me and that I'm in the very best of health. There will be many a poor boy over here who will never write home again and many who are unable to so that we should offer up a prayer of thanks that we are spared to do so. War is terrible and we can only hope that it will soon be over. But we can send forth the message to all we are endeavoring to do our best and are going to make the folks at home feel proud of us. The Americans who have been in the fighting have so far covered themselves with glory and will continue to do so.

The big push of the Germans in Flanders has cost both sides an enormous amount of men and we still hear the Germans are going to make another try at breaking the line, but you can rest assured they never will, and that when they get through trying maybe they will discover they have lost enough men and seek peace. Though we don't want peace as long as the kaiser rules.

Give my love to grandma and all the rest and hope I will soon be home to see you all. Lots of love,

HARRY.

Mrs. Pankhurst Here to Aid the War

Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, former militant suffrage leader of England, has arrived in this country and is planning a campaign to spur the women to aid in victory for democracy. "If Germany wins the war, woman's cause will be lost," is the message brought by Mrs. Pankhurst.

Flicks of Fashion
Vogues of the Moment in Omaha Shops

The heavier straw hats of spring are now being replaced by lovely, airy affairs of georgette, organdy, maline and horsehair braid and of leghorn, milan and fancy braids.

A certain store in town has a very notable assemblage of hats from a famous French master designer of beautiful chapeaux, each of which is surely unique and refreshing in its concept.

A very striking model reproduces an ingenious Paris idea of combining sheer navy georgette with beaver cloth of the same shade; the beaver giving the soft and becoming effect of fur trimming.

For the woman who adores a small hat, there is shown the Hindu turban, with its soft draped folds of georgette and band of white next the face; this style is doubtless an evolution of the war bride bonnet, but it has features which make it decidedly more chic and becoming than that popular bit of headgear.

Navy taffeta has been ruthlessly slashed into a fringe to make a dashing little turban, which with its accompaniment of a long, loose meshed dotted veil, bordered with the fringed taffeta, is fascinating enough to make any lover of exceptional hats long to be its possessor.

Feather turbans, the ultimate word in smart millinery, are also shown in this collection of hats. One of these is made of pheasant breasts trimmed with shiny duck wings; another is composed entirely of pheasant tails, while open blue ostrich, which is tied so as to form tiny curls atop the crown, is the pleasing covering of another stunning chapeau. These feather hats are enticing enough to make a member of the Audubon society want to change her mind.

Polly

The Masculine Flirt

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

An outworn law still stands on the old Virginia books. It reads: "That any man who makes love to two women at the same time shall be tied to a whipping post and receive twenty lashes."

If ever that law was enforced the makers of whips must have done flourishing business.

"No, I do not think badly of men, but I recognize human nature's fondness for variety."

Deep down in our hearts most of us have glowing ideals of the one great love we long for in our lives. And men either mount their white chargers and go riding out into the world to seek that love or sit quietly at home accepting every attractive visitor who knocks at the door as the possible "dream girl."

In the process of hunting for the ideal or of waiting quietly for her, men are prone to grasp wildly at any straw which seems likely to save them from drowning in the sod of loneliness.

For instance, Charles is a student of human nature and an ardent psychologist who thoroughly enjoys attending lectures and conferences and meetings where vital statistics are discussed. He likes reading philosophy, too, and discussing his meetings and his readings.

Adds Zest.

Laura also enjoys these very things, and Charles finds her first a "sympathetic friend," then perhaps a "charming woman"—and so perhaps accumulates a certain amount of affection to add zest to the relationship. He may mistake this for love—or permit Laura to.

On the other side of his nature Charles likes gayety, dancing, laughter, song and music, and it is Marguerite whose nature appeals to his and responds to his in this field of enjoyment.

Now if Charles drifts into a semi-love affair with Laura and another half portion with Marguerite, he is "more to be pitied than scorned," because in looking for his dream girl he found certain phases of her in separate individuals. Of course, unless Charles is wise and sane and strong, he is bound to make one of the two women who appeals to him unhappy.

On the other hand, there is Horace, who enjoys emotions, who loves conquest, who glories in feeling a nature respond to his as the violin to the hand of the master.

It is Horace who brings miserable unhappiness into the world. He makes wild love to Molly because his ability to turn her artless sweetness into deep emotions pleases him. It flatters him to find that he can gain power over cold Caroline, and he may even be struggling at the same time to force coquettish Kitty to depend on him for her real happiness.

Wants Power.

Horace wants power. He needs variety. He longs for constant stimulation. And like the stage juggler who keeps two or three balls in the air at a time, Horace "keeps three women guessing."

If the old Virginia law could be enforced, the Horaces of the world would be through. The coward who glories in his power over women and who finds keen joy in making love to two or three without any feeling of responsibility, could be frightened away from his favorite game if he knew there were any penalty to pay.

The male flirt is a contemptible creature who likes to enjoy himself without paying the reckoning. He never puts himself in any one else's place. The thought that through him a woman had been made unhappy will in no wise affect him.

The man who makes love to two women at a time feels nothing real; he is capable of nothing more than an excited feeling of emotional stimulation. He enjoys conquest, he glories in power. He revels in his own feelings. He is a thief without conscience and a liar without bounds. "Twenty lashes" is small punishment for the agony he causes.

The real reason why a male flirt is a menace and a danger to society is that his selfish cunning and his practiced sham are often more charming to women than the simple honesty of the man who cannot make love, but who can only feel it.

Glass Hair for German Dolls

Artificial and substitute hair is being made in Germany, according to information gathered by commerce reports, which says: "The importation of human hair from China has long been stopped. The surrogate which is being used is really a substitute for silk. At first silk hair was made, but the sale of this article was forbidden by the government. For dolls, glass hair is made."

$100,000 Monthly Income

According to an article published in the Kansas City Star of June 5th, Peter Paulson of Towanda Township, Butler County, has received $100,000 Monthly from one-eighth royalty from oil production on his Kansas farm.

$4,000,000 has been offered Mr. Paulson for one-half of his one-eighth interest.

We are positively convinced, judging by the existing geological condition and reports of the U. S. Government experts on High Island, that we are going to be successful in bringing in tremendous gushers on our property.

In order to quickly raise drilling funds, we are selling quarter-acre tracts for $30 each.

Should your tracts be drilled you will receive royalty of one-tenth of all oil produced and saved therefrom.

In addition you also share proportionately in our profits from all wells drilled on the entire 1,000 acres at High Island, and from all wells drilled on our lease in the heart of the famous Humble Gusher Oil Field, where we already know we have the oil.

Why should any one hesitate in buying $30 quarter-acre tracts when their money is so safe, and where the prospects of making a fortune from the investment are unlimited?

For a short time orders will be accepted one-third down, balance in 30 and 60 days.
