SAFETY WATCHWORD ON U. S. TROOPSHIP

Government Makes Journey So Safe That It Is Really an Uneventful Journey.

(Correspondence of the Associated Press.) London, May 30.—No greater care and secrecy could attend the shipment of royal jewels than is observed in shipping American troops to France. To safeguard his boys Uncle Sam takes every possible precaution, from the time they embark until the transport has reached its destination. He leaves no loophole for the machinations of enemy agents.

Usually, as a result of this elaborate protective system, the trip from "An Atlantic Port" to the French or English port, is remarkably uneventful. All elements of danger have been so carefully anticipated that the risk is reduced to the lowest minimum.

Until the troops and civilian passengers have reached the pier they do not know the name of their ship. It is only a number to them. On the regular troopships it is difficult for a civilian, unless he is engaged in war work, to secure a passage. Those who manage to do so are subjected to close scrutiny, and their credentials and luggage are thoroughly examined.

None Allowed at Pier. Embarkation often begins several days before the transport sails. All goods have been sent before the troops start for the ship. No relatives or friends may accompany them to the pier. This rule applies to the officers as well as to the men.

Once aboard, there they remain, no shore communication being permitted. This regulation imposes no hardship other than inactivity. Until all troops have been assigned to quarters and organization has been effected, the men are left pretty much to their own devices.

No restriction is placed on writing, and bags are kept open for soldiers' mail up to almost the hour of sailing. This privilege gives many a chance to get off neglected letters and postcards, although these, as a matter of precaution, are not put into the mails until the ship has passed through the submarine zone.

The troops also take advantage of an arrangement devised by the government for the sending of "safe arrival" messages. Telegrams or postcards advising family and friends that the writer has made the trip in safety may be prepared in advance and left in charge of the authorities at the port of sailing. As soon as word is received by cable of the ship's arrival on the other side, the telegrams and cards are released to the wires and mails. Not only is much time saved by this plan, but the soldiers are spared the high cost of cabling from Europe.

With the exception of the ship's executives and the officers in military command, no one aboard knows the hour fixed for sailing, and this becomes a favorite topic for speculation among the men. But finally the last soldier has come up the gang-plank and the last piece of freight has been stowed away. A busy little tug appears alongside and begins to nose the vessel like a terrier investigating a grayhound.

Suddenly there is a blast from the ship's whistle, and then are enacted a few details of the familiar scene which before the war was witnessed whenever a transatlantic liner left its pier. The comparison, however, is extremely limited. The call of "All ashore that are going ashore" affects only a few stevedores and perhaps an official or two, who move leisurely off.

What excitement there is is confined to those on the ship. There is none on the pier for the reason that it is now empty and its great doors are closed. Only a blank wall looms there.

On deck the movement, instead of being toward the transport's rails, is away from them. Orders have been given for the troops to go to their quarters, so that when the ship is leaving harbor no uniform may be visible to any prying eyes on shore.

Slowly the big vessel is coaxed by the tug into the stream, and majestically she gets under way. A few civilian passengers, to the envy of officers and men, hang over the rails and watch the city's skyline fade away in a veil of mist. It is safe now for the troops to appear. They rush out on deck, boisterously eager for the sight—strange to many of the open sea. A glance is cast toward the vague line on the horizon that is home. Then they turn and peer forward into the mystery of the unknown, toward the scene of the great adventure—over there.

In the Silent Drama

Empress—"Makers of History" a gorgeous patriotic spectacle, with a beautiful feature on the vaudeville program at the Empress Theatre for the benefit of the Red Cross. The sketch was produced and presented by Albert Leroy and gives an opportunity of seeing the great men in a dramatic setting. The renowned violinist, Vera Berlin, is another exceptionally big feature on the same program. She adds to her popularity by rendering other classic music on her program. Sotny and Norton, whirlwind dancers, and Fred Elliott, the broomstick fiddler, complete the vaudeville offering. Gladys Bookwell in "The Scarlet Road," and Charles Chaplin in "The Roustabout" are the features on the vaudeville bill.

Strand—Supporting Dorothy Dalton in her latest Paramount photoplay of the far north, "Truant Peter," which was shown at the Strand Sunday and Monday, the program again today and Tuesday and Wednesday with motion picture fans throughout the country. In this delightful photoplay, Miss Dalton is seen as a Canadian girl, daughter of a reckless Canadian whom she fears and to whose stern will she is wholly subjected. Her resistance to her father's plan, which treats her shamefully and to which treatment she submits with the patience born of her inherent fear of men and things, is a story that is thrilling from start to finish.

Rialto—One of the recent masterpieces of filmdom, "The Fall of the Romanoffs," a stirring tale of Russia, was shown at the Rialto theatre Sunday and is on the program again today and Wednesday. The production is the individual effort of Herbert Brenon, creator of many of the biggest photoplays shown in the world. Its assembling and collection of material was a task of no small magnitude. The picture is a former confidant to Rasputin, the black magic used by the czar's favorite, who is written. He plays in all of the stirring scenes in which he really took part. This is the big, big picture—the "fall of the Romanoffs," which is entirely realistic and genuine.

Mus—In "The Claw," with Clara Kimball Young, the greatest and most distinctive story of the South African veldt, a picture of Cynthia Stockley's novel of the same name. In the character of Mary Martin, the young girl, the part of a girl who, loving one man, is made to believe that he is already married and she comes to the realization of the fact after a dramatic scene leaves her husband with only a knife for her companion and the love of the man who has deceived her for her lover. Her action arouses her husband and he proves himself a man by aiding the lovers. The picture is a masterpiece of the kind which has been produced most realistically and many of the animals of the South African veldt have been photographed in some of the scenes.

Sun—June Elvidge, appearing for the last time today in "The Woman of Redemptive Portraiture," the greatest and most distinctive story of the South African veldt, a picture of Cynthia Stockley's novel of the same name. In the character of Mary Martin, the young girl, the part of a girl who, loving one man, is made to believe that he is already married and she comes to the realization of the fact after a dramatic scene leaves her husband with only a knife for her companion and the love of the man who has deceived her for her lover. Her action arouses her husband and he proves himself a man by aiding the lovers. The picture is a masterpiece of the kind which has been produced most realistically and many of the animals of the South African veldt have been photographed in some of the scenes.

Hamilton—Henry Walthall, appearing in the comedy-drama, "The Man Who Finds Things for You," a picture of the series of events which make up this interesting comedy. The theme of the story follows a man, a steady-going business man, into a romantic lover who takes advantage of every opportunity to win the girl in the case who makes things move with considerable rapidity in the attainment of his object. The big feature of the last of the week here will be one of the best known of the comedies of the "Heart of a Lion," and one in which this star appears to especially good advantage.

Lothrop—William S. Hart in "Blue Blazes Rawden" appears in the role of a Canadian lumberjack in place of the well known dress of the cowboy of most of his plays. The scenes are set in the northwest lumber forests, many of them being centered in the city of Seattle. The combination hotel, dance hall, gambling place and saloon is the gathering place of everyone and in here some sensational things take place. The picture is a masterpiece of the kind which has been produced most realistically and many of the animals of the South African veldt have been photographed in some of the scenes.

Stanford Shot in Shoulder—Aaron Stanford, colored, chauffeur, rooming at the home of Mrs. T. L. Hawthorne, 1107 North Nineteenth street, was shot in the shoulder, causing a slight flesh wound, by William E. Hickey, colored, at his home, 1024 North Twenty-first street, Sunday morning. The shooting occurred over an altercation between the two men. The police have been unable to locate Hickey.

Injured by Auto—J. E. Johnson, employed on a farm four miles north of Florence, was cut and badly bruised about the head about 7 o'clock Sunday night when he was struck by an automobile driven by E. R. Stiphpen, 1219 North Thirty-first street. The accident happened at Thirteenth and Douglas streets.

NEW DEPARTMENT FOR UNIVERSITY As War Measure Federal Service to Teach Professional Employment to Be Introduced.

Lincoln, Neb., June 23.—(Special.)—A plan of co-operation has been entered into by the United States employment service of the Department of Labor and the University of Nebraska as a war measure for conducting a federal service for teaching professional employment. Professor Reed, secretary of the bureau, has been placed in charge of the federal service. The expenses are to be met by the government and the University of Nebraska, jointly.

The services of this bureau will be free to all properly qualified candidates for teaching and other professional services. The records and files of the bureau will be open at any time to inspection by the properly authorized representatives of any other institution having candidates registered in the bureau, in order that the services rendered to the registrants from other institutions may be verified.

Result of Plan. The result of this plan will be to place at the disposal of school boards, educational institutions and all persons or corporations employing professional assistance a medium of exchange by means of which the supply and demand can be determined at any time. The records of all the teachers and other persons who may desire professional employment will be kept on file and will continuously be brought down to date.

It is contended that in this emergency when the ranks of all professionals are being thinned by the call of men to the colors, the bureau will be of distinct advantage to the state in securing a list of women qualified to fill the vacancies created.

State Superintendent Clemmons has given the plan his endorsement and will co-operate to make the work of the organization effective in its relation to the schools of Nebraska. The scope of the bureau is as broad as the teaching profession, and includes rural schools, graded schools, high schools, normal schools, colleges and universities.

First of Its Kind. This is the first attempt in the United States to establish a plan of co-operation between the United States Department of Labor and an educational institution.

When the press reports announced a few weeks ago that the United States Department of Labor was to establish in Omaha a division of employment service for labor, the idea was conceived of creating a branch office in the University of Nebraska for teaching and other professional services. Acting Chancellor Hastings wired Chancellor Avery in Washington, who took the matter up with Senator Hitchcock, who gave the proposition his endorsement. Within a few days Mrs. W. E. Cramer of the United States Employment Service, Kansas City, was sent to Lincoln to investigate the proposed plan.

It was finally decided to initiate the work in an experimental way in the University of Nebraska. An agent was here recently and made final arrangements for the transfer of this work from the university to the bureau established for the joint service.
