Cub Owners Start Season Just $700,000 Dollars In the Hole

The Cubs have turned out to be a mighty expensive proposition. President Weeghman and his partners have spent bags of money to promote the team in Chicago. They paid $500,000 for the franchise in 1916, and Since last fall the Cub owners have spent $50,000 for Alexander and Killefer, $12,000 for Tyler, $10,000 for Hollocher and $10,000 for Barber. Up to this season the Cubs have lost a lost of the second, 4 to 1. Scores: to this season the Cubs have lost a lot of money in operating expenses, so that when the pennant races began April it was roughly estimated that the Chicago magnates were at least $700,000 in the hole.

Escape Draft Board When

League Cashes in Chips draft age members of the Vernon base ball club of the Pacific Coast league responded to summons today before a local draft board to show cause why they should not engage in work essential to the conduct of the war, or be placed in Class 1-A of the se-lective draft, the board decided to not examine them, in view of the fact that the club was about to disband.

A showing was made that the members of the team were engaged in essential occupations when the base ball season ended, and the board decided that no hearing was necessary and issed the summons without making any record of the case.
