"She's a fairy who gave me three wishes long ago and sent me on an adventure, in which I was crowned Princess of Birdland."

"I wish the Wishing Rose would give father his wishes," sighed Countess Alice wistfully, patting the clown's head and brushing away his tears.

"What are his wishes?" asked Peggy sympathetically.

"First. He wishes to see Brother Bob, our soldier boy, who is due to pass through town this afternoon on his way to France.

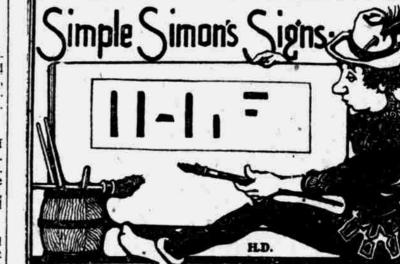

"Second. He wants to make our act the best in the circus, and he is in despair because the animals are cranky and everything goes so badly the people instead of laughing at our fun turn away their heads to look at other stunts.
