

SLEEPY-TIME TALES

THE TALE OF MRS. LADYBUG

CHAPTER X. A Bit of News.

Chirpy Cricket was looking for Mrs. Ladybug. He had news for her. Now, it wasn't often that anybody could tell Mrs. Ladybug any-

"I don't remember," he answered. thing. Usually she was the one that told other people bits of gossip. So Chirpy Cricket was specially eager to find her and make known to her what he had learned.

It was about Mrs. Ladybug's cousin. At least, there was a person living in the vegetable garden who claimed to be a cousin of Mrs. Ladybug's.

Chirpy found Mrs. Ladybug in the orchard. But strange to say, she didn't seem at all interested in his news.

"I dare say I have a cousin in the garden," she told him. "Ours is a big family. I have more cousins than I could ever count. They're as plentiful as the leaves on the trees. I can't stop my work to go and see this one. If I called on all my cousins I'd never have time to help Farmer Green."

Chirpy Cricket looked disappointed. He had expected Mrs. Ladybug to show great interest in what he told her. She certainly always thought that others ought to pay strict attention when she related the happenings about the farm. And she always wanted them to act surprised and pleased.

"Aren't you going to the garden?" Chirpy Cricket demanded. Don't you intend to be polite to your cousin?"

"Humph!" said Mrs. Ladybug. "She can't be any busier than I am. Why doesn't she come to the orchard to call on me?"

"She can't do that," he explained. "Your cousin says that it wouldn't be etiquette. She says you've lived on the farm longer than she has."

"Rubbish!" Mrs. Ladybug scolded. "I'm a plain working person. There's too much to do, during the summer, for me to bother with such nonsense."

Chirpy Cricket found her rather discouraging. Still he hadn't given up hope of making Mrs. Ladybug change her mind.

"I fear you're making a mistake," he remarked. "You ought to see this cousin. She's different from any of your family that I've ever met before."

"How is she different?" Mrs. Ladybug demanded, peering in her pursuit of insects on the leaves of the apple tree. At last she began to show some signs of interest.

"I don't know," Chirpy Cricket replied. "I can't say. Maybe it's her clothes that make her look strange."

Mrs. Ladybug then started to ask him questions—which was the best of proof that her curiosity had been aroused.

"What sort of gown was my cousin wearing?" she inquired. "Was it a red polka dot, like mine?"

"I don't remember," he answered. "What colors did she have on?"

"I didn't notice," said Chirpy Cricket. Mrs. Ladybug gave him a look of disgust.

"Well, if that isn't just like a man!" she spluttered. "Men never can tell how a body's dressed. If I want to learn anything more about this cousin of mine I suppose I'll have to go and see her with my own eyes."

And that afternoon she went to the vegetable garden. (Copyright, 1921, By The Metropolitan Newspaper Service.)

Common Sense

By J. J. MUNDY.

Lending a Hand.

Some men are afraid to be useful around home for fear there will be too many odd jobs left for them in their leisure hours.

Wives who are physically able should not expect the men of the household to help with the housework.

Most men have to exert themselves so much in business that they need rest when they get home.

Making a living for the family is not all a picnic. Many a tired man has little joy in the thought of home at night, because he knows that there will be a thousand and one things left to him when he gets home, and usually the things about the house are distasteful to a man as an occupation.

Most men would be glad to be obliging, but they dread that strange hold which some women try to put on their leisure hours.

BRINGING UP FATHER---

© 1921 by INT'L FEATURE SERVICE, INC.

Jack and Jill

"It must be awfully jolly," said Jill, dreamily, laying down the magazine she had been immersed in for half an hour.

"Let's play checkers, honey," said Jack.

"Oh, no let's think about going to England to live. That's a whole lot more fun."

Jack stared at his Jill-girl. "Talk about going to England to live?" he repeated. "What is this, a new game?"

"Oh, no, Jack," pouted Jill, who pouted very frequently for she knew her pout to be adorable. "I've been reading about how many people are going to England to live. It must be awfully jolly. I wish we could go."

"Yes?"

"Oh, Jack, don't be sarcastic. I just loathe sarcasm. And, anyway, we would have a lot of money by living in England."

"How come—on saving money?"

"Well, you know our money is worth almost twice as much as English money. I mean that you get six shillings for a dollar. And house rent! Why, Jack, this article in the magazine says you can hire a beautiful house, all furnished, with five masters' bedrooms and three servants' rooms, and dining room and kitchen and a garden and everything for three guineas a week."

"Guineas?"

"Yes?"

"Mr. Flicker's gone away," mourns the ivy vine, "Miss the tunes he used to play. On the old dead pine. When we heard the rat-tat-too of his rolling drum, All the forest people knew That the Spring had come."

But little Mr. Angle worm, Wriggling on his way, Says: "I'm rid of that old kid, Mighty glad he's gone!"

"Mr. Flicker's gone away," mourns the ivy vine, "Miss the tunes he used to play. On the old dead pine. When we heard the rat-tat-too of his rolling drum, All the forest people knew That the Spring had come."

But little Mr. Angle worm, Wriggling on his way, Says: "I'm rid of that old kid, Mighty glad he's gone!"

"I don't know," said Jill seriously, "but the house that I speak of can be hired for three guineas a week. This paper says that is about thirteen dollars in our money. And you can get a maid for fifteen shillings a week, which is—"

"But Jill dear—"

"And oh, all the beautiful things to see in dear old England, Jack; just think of that. This article says that there are thousands of Americans there now and they're celebrating the Fourth of July and Thanksgiving and everything just like we do here at home."

Jack coughed.

"Dear me, I'll bet it's awfully jolly living over there, and seeing the prince of waters every day walking along Piccadilly street and all that."

"I'll stare dreamily into the fireplace constructing the dream picture in her nimble little mind.

"A wfully jolly," she sighed happily. "Well, I suppose we might try it for a while. See how we like it," said Jack calmly.

"Oh, Jack, darling, do you really mean it?" Jill threw her arms around him ecstatically and kissed him rapturously. "Oh, wouldn't that be wonderful?"

"Yes, it sure would, honey," said Jack with a happy sigh, "but there's only one little trouble, just one small problem we've got to solve before we can make the move."

"Oh, you leave that to me, Jack, dear, I'll solve it. That is, if Jack drew away cautiously and got over near the door.

"Well, we'd have to buy a plane or something so I could commute between the office and dear old London, because you see, the boss would never let me go to work on time, whether I flew over here or in England, and—"

More Truth Than Poetry

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

IT'S AN ILL WIND— "Hate to see the robin go," Sighs the lonely breeze, "How he darted to and fro Through the maple trees. Back in Maytime weather, When the little chap and I Sang duets together."

But old Mr. Caterpillar, Creeping on the lawn, Says: "I'm rid of that old kid, Mighty glad he's gone!"

"Mr. Flicker's gone away," Mourns the ivy vine, "Miss the tunes he used to play. On the old dead pine. When we heard the rat-tat-too of his rolling drum, All the forest people knew That the Spring had come."

But little Mr. Angle worm, Wriggling on his way, Says: "I'm rid of that old kid, Mighty glad he's gone!"

"Mr. Flicker's gone away," Mourns the ivy vine, "Miss the tunes he used to play. On the old dead pine. When we heard the rat-tat-too of his rolling drum, All the forest people knew That the Spring had come."

But little Mr. Angle worm, Wriggling on his way, Says: "I'm rid of that old kid, Mighty glad he's gone!"

"I don't know," said Jill seriously, "but the house that I speak of can be hired for three guineas a week. This paper says that is about thirteen dollars in our money. And you can get a maid for fifteen shillings a week, which is—"

"But Jill dear—"

"And oh, all the beautiful things to see in dear old England, Jack; just think of that. This article says that there are thousands of Americans there now and they're celebrating the Fourth of July and Thanksgiving and everything just like we do here at home."

Jack coughed.

"Dear me, I'll bet it's awfully jolly living over there, and seeing the prince of waters every day walking along Piccadilly street and all that."

"I'll stare dreamily into the fireplace constructing the dream picture in her nimble little mind.

"A wfully jolly," she sighed happily. "Well, I suppose we might try it for a while. See how we like it," said Jack calmly.

"Oh, Jack, darling, do you really mean it?" Jill threw her arms around him ecstatically and kissed him rapturously. "Oh, wouldn't that be wonderful?"

"Yes, it sure would, honey," said Jack with a happy sigh, "but there's only one little trouble, just one small problem we've got to solve before we can make the move."

"Oh, you leave that to me, Jack, dear, I'll solve it. That is, if Jack drew away cautiously and got over near the door.

"Well, we'd have to buy a plane or something so I could commute between the office and dear old London, because you see, the boss would never let me go to work on time, whether I flew over here or in England, and—"

"Well, we'd have to buy a plane or something so I could commute between the office and dear old London, because you see, the boss would never let me go to work on time, whether I flew over here or in England, and—"

"Well, we'd have to buy a plane or something so I could commute between the office and dear old London, because you see, the boss would never let me go to work on time, whether I flew over here or in England, and—"

"Well, we'd have to buy a plane or something so I could commute between the office and dear old London, because you see, the boss would never let me go to work on time, whether I flew over here or in England, and—"

"Well, we'd have to buy a plane or something so I could commute between the office and dear old London, because you see, the boss would never let me go to work on time, whether I flew over here or in England, and—"

"Well, we'd have to buy a plane or something so I could commute between the office and dear old London, because you see, the boss would never let me go to work on time, whether I flew over here or in England, and—"

"Well, we'd have to buy a plane or something so I could commute between the office and dear old London, because you see, the boss would never let me go to work on time, whether I flew over here or in England, and—"

"Well, we'd have to buy a plane or something so I could commute between the office and dear old London, because you see, the boss would never let me go to work on time, whether I flew over here or in England, and—"

"Well, we'd have to buy a plane or something so I could commute between the office and dear old London, because you see, the boss would never let me go to work on time, whether I flew over here or in England, and—"

"All Vows" Usher In "Yom Kippur"

Hebrews Observe Most Sacred Of Jewish Holy Days With Rigid Fast.

"Yom Kippur," most sacred of all Jewish holy days, will be observed today, a rigid fast day, wherever members of the faith dwell, even to the farthest corners of the earth. "Yom Kippur," translated, is "the day of atonement."

Observed in last night by the traditional "Kol Nidre," "All Vows," a haunting melody centuries old. Hebrew prayers recited today will be the same which have echoed through Jewish houses of worship for more than 2,000 years.

Except in reform Jewish temples, no change has ever been made in the orthodox ritual.

Memorial prayers for the dead are a part of the service.

Pledges for Keren Hayesod, the Palestine foundation fund for re-colonizing the holy land, and relief for suffering brethren in central Europe, will be asked by rabbis and prominent laymen in each synagogue, as well as Temple Israel, today.

Rabbi Frederick Cohn, Morris Taxon, Herman Cohn and H. Grodinsky will conduct services in the five local houses of Jewish worship. Last night at the Russian synagogue, Rabbi Taxon's sermon was "Redemption of Pledges."

This morning at Beth Hamedorah synagogue, he preaches on "Ideal Purity."

Another of the favorites of the films who is likely to be lost by the fans for a time at least is Jackie Saunders, who is to appear in a stage play for A. H. Wood.

"Bull" Montana, famous for his hard-boiled characterizations in the movies, was admitted to full citizenship by the naturalization court in Los Angeles the other day. His name was changed from Luigi Montagna to Louis Montana.

"Kindred of the Dust," made from Peter B. Kyne's novel, just completed, will be one of the largest productions ever made by R. A. Walsh.

The United States internal revenue department has served notice on film companies that they must not change the names of ships in their films.

Council Approves Sale Of Bonds in New York

The city council approved unanimously yesterday the action taken by City Commissioner D. B. Butler, in charge of the department of accounts and finance, in selling $50,000 additional park bonds at private sale to H. L. Allen & Co., New York City.

"We advertised three times last spring for bids for $950,000 city bonds and not one Omaha bond house offered a bid on the basis of par and accrued interest," said Commissioner Butler.

Secretary-Treasurer of Coopers' Union Dies in K. C.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 11.—William R. Deal, 51, for the last 11 years secretary-treasurer of the Coopers' International union of North America, died at his home in Kansas City, Kan., last night.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Eyes Strained?

If your eyes are work-strained or tired; if your vision is dim or blurred; if it bothers you to read; if your eyes burn or itch or ache; if you wear glasses, get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets from the Sherman & McConnell 5 stores, dissolve one in a fourth of a glass of water and use as directed to bathe the eyes. Bon-Opto has brought comfort and relief to thousands and thousands.

Woodward's TWIN-EIGHT CHOCOLATES

INNER-CIRCLE CANDIES

A Million Bottles Makes a Million Pints of

MENTHO-LAXENE COUGH AND COLD SYRUP

Make a pint and keep free from colds and coughs. All Druggists

MOVIES

Remember "Bobby" Harron, the lovable movie hero who used to play the part of a Romeo opposite Dorothy Gish?

This is his brother, John Harron, who has entered filmland as a comedian. His first starring vehicle will be "The Grim Comedian," now in the making.

Today's Attractions.

Sun—Pauline Frederick in "Salvage."

Strand—Richard Barthelmess in "Experience."

Rialto—Thomas Meighan in "Cap-py Ricks."

Moon—Dustin Farnum in "The Primal Law."

Empress—Pearl White in "Know Your Men."

Muse—"The Easy Road."

Grand—Hoot Gibson in "Action" and "Miracles of the Jungle," No. 1.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

French and German Workers For Red Cross Reach Moscow

Riga, Oct. 11.—Advices received here are to the effect that representatives of the French and German Red Cross have arrived in Moscow to aid in famine relief work.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

Air Traffic Above Omaha Regulated by Ordinance

Omaha's first air regulatory ordinance was passed by the city council yesterday. The measure was proposed by the Omaha Aero club.

The ordinance, which will be in force on October 16, will check the ambitions of pilots who dust the tops of buildings and otherwise demonstrate their aerial proclivities above the corporate limits of the city of Omaha.

Aviators will be examined by a board, of which the police commissioner shall be a member. An "air traffic cop" will be added to the police department.

Man Dies Sitting in Chair

Three Days After Wedding

County officers are investigating the sudden death of Thomas Lawless, 67, living near Ninth and Clark streets, who was found dead sitting in his chair on the porch yesterday morning.

Lawless, said to have been the owner of the tract known as "Wingspread Triangle" near the river, had been married three times, his final marriage having taken place but three days ago, with Veronica Kovalska, 43, a former neighbor, was the bride.

A single orange tree of average size will bear 20,000 oranges in the course of its life.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

The Saxophone advertisement for Mickel's, featuring an illustration of a saxophone and text about the quality of their instruments.

Pierce Arrow Trucks advertisement, featuring an illustration of a truck and text about its reliability and performance.

Parker's Hair Balm advertisement, featuring an illustration of a woman and text about the benefits of the hair product.

Bowen's Value-Giving Store advertisement, featuring an illustration of a woman and text about the variety of goods available.

Baby Wants Cuticura advertisement, featuring an illustration of a baby and text about the benefits of Cuticura for infants.

Thor Electric Cleaner advertisement, featuring an illustration of the cleaner and text about its effectiveness in household cleaning.