Problems That Perplex

Answered by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

17 Years' Difference. Dear Miss Fairfax: About a year ago I met a man 25 whom I have grown to love. My mother objects to my going about with him on account of his age.

Dear Miss Fairfax: I am in love with a young fellow of 22. But we had a quarrel in which I hurt him, and he has not spoken to me for the last five months.

Dear Miss Fairfax: I am going with a young man one year my senior. He loves me and I love him, but his parents object to me.

Housewife: Changes in work which prevent a sense of monotony will greatly increase the power to work. A clerk will do more work and do it more effectively if he is occasionally allowed something else to do than to foot up columns.

Worried: The ill of both health and beauty that constipation causes would make a lengthy list that would startle a good many people.

A. M. H., Lexington: I cannot secure the address of the art company you ask about.

Crabshaw: We can't afford a car. Mrs. Crabshaw—Why, the house isn't mortgaged, is it?

My Marriage Problems

Adelle Garrison's New Phase of "REVELATIONS OF A WIFE"

What Mrs. Rundle Tried to Put Over on Robert Savarin. A melancholy looking individual, tall, lanky, with his hair falling loosely around his pallid face and in the style I have only seen in burlesque pictures of artists, and wearing over a pair of khaki trousers a saffron-colored blouse which accentuated the general billowness of his appearance, sat dejectedly upon the steps of the art gallery.

"Don't mind him!" Mrs. Rundle turned back to whisper eagerly in Lillian's ear. There was a crafty look in her eyes which told me that she was afraid some of Lillian's ready sympathy might be diverted from her own case.

"The Soul Painter." "Don't mind him!" Mrs. Rundle turned back to whisper eagerly in Lillian's ear. There was a crafty look in her eyes which told me that she was afraid some of Lillian's ready sympathy might be diverted from her own case.

"My conception of the soul of an idle woman." "I take it this is the work of the gentleman outside who looks like the before-taking picture of a liver-pill advertisement," Lillian commented in an undertone, and Mrs. Rundle nodded an assent.

"All these conceptions of souls around the walls are his," she returned, in the same low tone. "He claims he can see through any one's eyes the naked soul beneath. I dodge him every time I see him for fear he'll want to paint mine. But I guess it's too purple-hued, even for him."

She gave a cynical little chuckle and ushered us through groups of people gathered around the canvases hung upon the walls to the front of the room. There the auctioneer, a dapper white-faceted little man with an eye-glass, was conferring with a severely-gowned, school-ma'am looking spinster, who evidently was the "arranger" of the affair.

"Miss Corwin, Mr. Hunt!" she began eagerly. "Just think of it! Here is Robert Savarin, come to have a look at us."

That both knew what Robert Savarin's name means in the art world, I saw by the look in their eyes. The most ever-fertile eagerness with which they shook his hand. It is the same attitude which I have seen Dicky display, although the intimacy of our mountain life together this summer has made Dicky more the chum of Robert Savarin than the devotee.

"No—oh, no!" Robert Savarin protested hurriedly, and there was that in his tone which, quieted even the audacious Mrs. Rundle. "I have just come in to look over Mrs. Rundle's pictures, at Mrs. Underwood's request. I cannot stay, and I do not wish any publicity."

"As you wish, of course, Mr. Savarin," Miss Corwin returned, but I noticed that as soon as we moved away she fluttered like an excited moth from one group of people to another, and I knew that before the auction was resumed every one in the room would know the identity of the grave, distinguished-looking man who was walking around the ex-

Chocolate Ice Cream.

Mix half a teaspoon of sugar, a pinch of salt and two teaspoons of flour. Add a slightly beaten egg and gradually add a cup of milk and cook over hot water to a smooth custard. Melt a square of Baker's chocolate over hot water, add a quarter of a cup of sugar and a sixth of a cup of boiling water.

Add this mixture to the custard. Cool, add a pint of this cream and two teaspoons of vanilla and freeze.

Is This Convincing?

"Pa, what is a convincing argument?" "One which agrees with your own ideas on the subject, my son."
