

Sleuth and One Bandit Killed In Gun Battle

Two Others Wounded as Officers Storm Rendezvous of Thieves on Farm Near Council Bluffs.

(Continued From Page One.) woman. They herded the five men into one room of the farm house and disarmed them. A sixth man was sleeping in a car in the yard. The woman, who appeared to be sick, was permitted to remain in bed. Four of the men carried .45 caliber revolvers.

After the men were rounded up the woman began to choke violently and Knox summoned the man who is believed to be W. A. Bennett. "Your wife seems sick, you'd better go in and see her," Knox told the man.

The suspected thief went into the room. There, it is believed, the woman in a man's slipper slipped a gun to the man, for a few seconds later he appeared at the doorway of the room and opened fire on Lane and Murray.

Murray instantly killed. Lane was wounded in the shoulder. Murray dropped to the floor dead.

Lane, although wounded, opened fire on his assailant. The man fell, but recovered sufficiently to fight his way out of the house. Just outside the back door, however, he fell again, this time dead.

Then the wounded detective turned his attention to the remaining prisoners. He walked into a fusilade of bullets and suffered a second wound, the bullet piercing his body just below the heart. The prisoners, when the firing began, seized the weapons which had been taken from them and rushed toward the door.

There they met Knox, Jones, Johnson and Morgan, who had been scouting the premises. In a barrage of shots they fought their way to freedom. With them was the woman, who as soon as the shooting started, quickly regained her health.

Run Out of Ammunition. A shot from the revolver of Knox is believed to have wounded the man who gave his name as Brown. The bullet struck him in the wrist and deflected into his neck.

In the exchange of shots that followed, the officers ran out of ammunition and thus made it possible for the fugitives to escape.

When the officers approached the place, they found one man asleep in a car in the yard. Entering the house they encountered five other men, four of whom were armed with .45 calibre revolvers. Herding the men into a room, the officers searched their pockets for guns.

These were turned over to Detective Lane, who then was placed in charge of the five men in the one room. Special Officer Murray was placed in charge of the woman.

When the man, believed to be Bennett, entered the room where the woman was lying in bed, Officer Murray's attention was momentarily distracted and it was during that time that the woman gave a gun, which had been secreted in the bed, to the man. With this Murray was killed and then attention was turned on Lane. As soon as Lane was injured, the men began firing and a bullet secured their guns from Lane's pocket.

Were Searching Garage. While the shooting was going on Sumner Knox and the other men in the raiding squad were searching a garage that stands on the north side of the house. They started for the house as soon as they heard the shooting, but were forced to retire by gunfire which was being directed at them from the windows in the house.

Under cover of the garage they commanded a clear view of the front and rear doors and north side of the house, but the bandits made their escape through a window on the south side of the house and gained the top of a hill from where they directed several shots in the general direction of the house and officers below. The band then broke up and started in different directions, making their escape.

Request for Vote on Municipal Plant Given Council—Company Then Makes New Offer.

Plattsmouth, Neb., Oct. 14.—(Special)—The city council has unanimously voted to hire an engineer to make estimates of the probable cost of a municipal lighting plant, following receipt of a petition signed by more than 200 residents asking that a municipal plant proposition be presented to the voters at a special election. Present at the same meeting was Manager James Kuykendall of the Nebraska Gas & Electric company, who promised a reduction from 15 cents to 13 cents per kilowatt to small private consumers and a renewal of the street lighting contract at present price, if the city would renew their contract for a period of years. Pressed for a statement regarding a reduction in the gas rate, now $2.25 per 1,000, Mr. Kuykendall held out little hope along that line. George F. West of Plattsmouth, president of the Plattsmouth Water company, also addressed a communication to the council informing them that the first 10-year period in their franchise would be up next May, and that it would either be up to the city to purchase the plant or stand by a raise in rates at that time. The only action taken was to refer the matter to a committee.

Every Move Watched.

Closer they approached the house and no one appeared at the door to challenge them. Such little fear did the officers have as to the imminent danger of a death battle that they left their guns untouched in their holsters.

But from a window in the front bedroom a "lookout" reported the advance of the officers upon the house. The din of the gun battle that resulted when the robber gang repulsed the raid by opening fire upon the officers, reverberated through the surrounding hills like the fire of snipers' bullets in the moonshine country.

Murray Fell First.

Robert Murray, special agent for the Northwestern railroad, was the first to fall mortally wounded by the open fire of the suspects. Elmer Lane, Council Bluffs detective, fell wounded not far from Murray.

This was the modest little farm house that was known for miles around as the Snyder Home turned in a few minutes to a veritable charnel house.

May Limit Time.

The Mellon letter also will deal with the length of time during which the authority to refund the foreign loans will remain effective. The ways and means committee favors limiting the time to three years instead of five years as provided in the bill approved by the senate finance committee.

Approval Necessary.

In the cases of actions by the proposed final approval by the president would be necessary.

Secretary Mellon.

Secretary Mellon, in his letter to the ways and means committee, also will discuss other proposed changes in the bill. One of these is the amendment which provides that the bonds of no country shall be substituted for those of another country without the sanction of congress. This is designed to prevent the acceptance of German or Austrian bonds. President Harding and Secretary Mellon see no serious objection to this amendment.

Representative Fordney.

Representative Fordney, chairman of the ways and means committee, will call a meeting early next week at which final action will be taken on the bill. Under the program of the house leaders the bill will be considered on the floor of the house on Thursday and probably passed with only one day's discussion. The administration hopes to obtain consideration of the bill in the senate immediately after the tax bill is passed, which probably will be before the end of October.

Illness Halts Probe Testimony Of Klan Wizard

Senator Watson, Stormy Petrol of Georgia, Interrupts Hearing With Demand for Fair Deal to Ku Klux.

Washington, Oct. 14.—William J. Simmons, imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, was prevented by illness today from appearing before a house committee for examination by members as to activities of the order. The imperial wizard collapsed yesterday at the close of a five hours statement and later was placed in charge of a physician who ordered him to stay in bed.

Dr. W. G. Manning, the physician attending Mr. Simmons, reported that he was suffering from acute bronchitis and general exhaustion.

Hearing Adjourned. Chairman Campbell adjourned the hearing after stating that Dr. Manning had informed him Mr. Simmons could not possibly appear earlier than Monday.

Simmons complained of illness when he took the stand yesterday. He resumed his testimony this morning with a huge purple muffer wound about his neck. He spoke with more than usual fervor when he was bringing his statement to a close and when he had finished he was seized with a violent nausea and sank into collapse, apparently in a state of utter exhaustion.

Klanmen gathered about him, giving him first aid and in the course of a few minutes he revived sufficiently to announce that he was ready to submit to cross-examination. His condition was such, however, that Chairman Campbell, after conference with members of the committee, decided to call the inquiry off for the day.

Watson Creates Scene.

Another exciting incident of the session was an unexpected invasion of the hearing room by Senator Tom Watson, the stormy petrel of Georgia politics, who demanded the right to question Colonel Simmons, and bluntly informed the committee that he was going to see that the imperial wizard received a square deal. He threw the hearing into a hubbub. Chairman Campbell at first attempted to prevent Senator Watson from asking questions. He said that he could not accord the privilege to an "outsider."

"I am not an outsider, and you will permit me if you want to be fair," Senator Watson shouted. "I am a United States senator and am going to see that the witness has a fair trial."

Colonel Simmons stepped forward and placed his hands on the fiery statesman's shoulder as if to calm him. After a moment's further delay Chairman Campbell said: "I think you may ask your question."

"Well, I won't claim my rights here," exploded Senator Watson, suddenly changing his mind, "but I will when this thing gets to the United States senate."

Inquiry to Proceed.

A few minutes later, Senator Watson, subsiding, quietly left the room. Between the imperial wizard's collapse and Senator Watson's outburst, much was added to the sum total of knowledge concerning the mysteries of the Klan. The committee apparently expects to proceed with the inquiry for several days longer before it decides whether to recommend a thorough congressional investigation of the Klan.

In his testimony, Colonel Simmons offered to leave the fate of the Klan to such an investigation. If the Klan is found guilty of the charges made against it, he said, he is willing to order it to disband at once.

The colonel vehemently denied that the Klan was the author of threatening letters. On the contrary, he stated, he has received hundreds of letters threatening him with death.

"I don't believe those letters came from the Klan," he said. "I do not believe the Klan wants to kill its own wizard."

Haynes Plans Big "House-Cleaning" In "Dry" Forces

Prohibition Commission to Weed Out Officers Not in Full Sympathy With Enforcement Policy.

Washington, Oct. 14.—Prohibition Commissioner Haynes, in a statement tonight, announced his determination to "correct weaknesses" in the various state prohibition enforcement corps. The department, he said, would use every effort to weed out enforcement officials, whether high or low, who did not appear to be in sympathy with his law-enforcement policy. The commissioner's statement was made after he had reached a decision to have a "thorough house-cleaning" in the Pennsylvania organization.

Mr. Haynes earlier in the day announced he had transferred John Exnicos, a general agent, from the Pacific department to the Pittsburgh district. Mr. Exnicos' suppliants Samuel B. Wolfe, whose future status was not made clear in the official statement, although it was reported his connection with the bureau would cease at an early date.

H. C. Ruter of the Washington headquarters already has been sent to Pennsylvania as associate director with State Director McConnell.

Mr. McConnell conferred with Mr. Haynes today, but the only information which came from the meeting was that the state director was "in thorough accord" with the commissioner's program. Reports that Mr. McConnell would resign again were denied.
