The cherub's name was Billie. "I see that brat next door has been tracking up our front porch again," said Jack, sourly, as he came home from the office. "Oh, little Billie?" answered Jill,

"Little Billie?" He positively mimicked her. "Why, that little devil ought to be whipped till he's black in the face."

"Jack, how shocking!" He glowered at her. 'Oh, that's all right to talk about how shocking and everything, but believe me, Jill, if I had a kid,, you can just bet he'd not be running wild all over the neighborhood, and making himself a confounded nuisance to the neighbors.' Jill shrugged a little impatiently.

"I think he's the darlingest little kid," she said.

"Well, I'd like to gag him, especially Sunday, when he's up about 6 o'clock in the morning, and his fool folks don't know any better than to let him play wild Indian out in the front yard. Honestly, Jill, that kid wakes me up every morning before

"I suppose that's the boy that de-livers the morning papers?" he asked with a sneer. "I'll just show this kid—"

And he started up savagely for the door.
"Jack!" she called after him, but he paid no heed beyond the slam-ming of the front door. She sighed resignedly and hurried back to the region of the kitchen where dinner was simmering in the hot-closet, and the odor of thick beef

Sterling Advances.

The incidents of the day which attracted attention were outside the railway question. A 4-cent advance in sterling exchange carried the rate to the highest of the season, leas than 5 cents below the $4$ rate of May 19, before the reparations transfers from London to New York began.

The persistence of this rise in exchange on London is an important and reassuring incident of the times. That the movement should occur on such a scale at the height of our staple export season, in the face of a London money market considerably lower than our own and on the eve of redemption of the last of the $150,009,000 United Kingdom loan of 1916. Is pretty sure proof of its underlying soundness. Other European rates advanced with sterling today. Chicago Grain

By CHARLES D. MICHAELS. Chicago Tribune-Omaha Bee Leased Wire. Chicago, Oct. 20 .- What little action there was in grain during the session occurred during the last 30 to 45 minutes. After the midday hour had passed with no apparent reaction in prices, the locals became more firmly intrenched on the bull side of the market and increased commitments. Shortly after it was announced that there were bids in the market for United States wheat from Argentine only 2c out of line. This had a reverse effect as all of the bulls tried to unload at once and as a result prices declined to lowest points on the crop. Shorts covered toward the last and prices rallied a cent from the bottom, closing 1/4c higher. Corn and oats both finished with gains of 36%%c. Rye declined 36%2c and barley 14c. Privisions generally were firmer. Wheat trade was exceedingly quiet. There seemed to be little disposition to do any trading. There is very little incentive to take the buying side, while prices are too low to attract selling. The trend of prices was erratic, but in the main they were higher. There was a little commission-house buy-ing early which caused a good bulge because of the small offerings.

Hedgers Sell.

The bulge brought out some selling on resting orders and prices reacted to below the previous close, but local support caused another rally. Most of the locals were inclined to act as disinterested spectators, but those who took an active part in the market were identified with the buying side. The selling appeared to be mainly from hedgers. Local receipts were estimated at 50 cars.

There was very little interest exhibited in the corn market. Prices were under the influence of the trend in wheat. Offerings were light, while buying was scattered. An eastern house picked up a fair quantity of corn on the dip. There was a broader domestic shipping demand in evidence, with sales of over 200,050 bushels booked since the close last night. The move to burn corn for fuel is springing up in prominence, but no serious consideration is given this matter. This sort of talk is heard every fall. Local receipts were estimated at 250 stocks on hand, but were not requested for this information.

A more hopeful outlook in regard to the rail strike situation was evident this morning. The more cheerful sentiment in the stock market was taken to suggest a better than even chance that no strike would be called. As a result there was a little better demand for wheat and other grain futures.

The Montreal Journal of Commerce says: "Due to lack of ocean tonnage and market conditions, acute grain congestion in the harbor here has again developed. Two of the largest elevators have suspended operations, being filled to capacity, Twenty-two grain boats from the great lakes are lying in the harbor with full holds and more are due. About 3,390 cars are waiting to be unloaded, while 30,000,000 bushels of grain is either in transit or stored between Georgian bay

Pit Notes.

Toledo has bought two cargoes of No. 1 Northern Canadian wheat and it is believed there will be other purchases. However, this wheat, after the duty is paid shows a tremendous premium over our December wheat. This, consequently, is not regarded as particularly beartish, that the demand for milling wheat should be keen enough to make fancy wheat command such high premiums.

In regard to the stocks of wheat estimated by the government in mill hands, some of the leading mills profess to be in ignorance as to the source the government report had for making such estimates. It is claimed that in many cases mills not only made no return as of stocks on hand, but were not requested for this information.

A more hopeful outlook in regard to the stock market was taken to suggest a better than even chance that no strike would be called. As a result there was a little better demand for wheat and other grain futures.

Drawn for The Bee by Sidney Smith. Indian Youth Dies From Severe Burns

Direct Descendant of Chief Fontenelle Victim of Accident.

An automobile race with death was lost yesterday morning when Dave Tyndall, 17, a full-blooded Indian youth living near Bancroft, died at the Swedish Mission hospital. The boy was engaged in filling the gasoline tank in the rear of his farm home Wednesday night and when he lighted his lantern to return to the house, gasoline that had fallen on his overalls burst into flames. He rushed to the house and endeavored to smother the flames with the aid of a rug. This failing he jumped into a water tank. He had been so severely burned, however, that the shock from the cold water was more than he could stand.

He was rushed in an automobile to the Omaha hospital arriving at 4:15 a. m. He died an hour later. Tyndall is a direct descendant of the famous Chief Fontenelle, according to his mother, Mrs. B. S. Grif-fith of Bancroft. He was a member of the Omaha tribe of Indians. South Side
