

Gabby Glibly Gossips of Girls

By GABBY DETAYLS. MISS MARY GIFFORD, who has been studying nursing in New York, has recently changed from the Roosevelt hospital to an eye and ear hospital.

A DARK-HAIRED princess of this year's Ak-Sar-Ben court is giving her friends food for thought. She is the graduate of a school in the south, and was rather interested in "one of those romantic southerners" to all intents.

GABBY doesn't like to give this man away, because "the girl" is supposed to be a secret. But she feels it her duty to let her girl friends know about it.

The gentleman is a newcomer, a professional man. Gabby doesn't say he isn't a clergyman, nor does she say he is. He is not particularly good-looking, but at least he is distinctive in appearance.

"YOU'D better make it snappy and get back to town. You're being cut out." This was the S. O. S. call sent out by a faithful friend to a blighted young man who has left Omaha to cure his aching heart to Apollo.

"SEE they put it in jail," the wee brown-eyed maid of called in a wire protector, "maybe it's in the hospital. Auntie was ill in bed and couldn't investigate, so the white-capped nurse locked out for the explanation.

Joint Party to Be Given for Young People of City

For the first time the Y. W. C. A. and the Y. M. C. A. will combine the entire forces of both organizations in a joint party to be given November 5. It will be under the direction of Miss Veriel Black.

Each Monday during the winter at 8:15 there will be a sports class for practice. The first six or eight weeks of the season will be devoted to volley ball followed by 12 weeks of basket ball.

Miss Black also has a class in gymnastics for colored girls meeting at the Colored Y. W. C. A. every Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock.

Miss Josephine Congdon

Percy MacKaye to Speak Here Thursday

Percy MacKaye, who comes to Omaha Thursday, November 3 to lecture before the Drama League at 4 o'clock at the Hotel Fontenelle, is an author and playwright of note.

Mr. MacKaye has long been known as the poet of American life, emotion and expression—the keenly perceptive dramatist of the New World Spirit.

In June, 1914, President Nichols of Dartmouth college conferred upon Percy MacKaye the honorary degree of M. A. with these words—"Master of Arts to Percy MacKaye, poet, dramatist, critic, whose large vision of the theater includes the pageantry and idealism of all men."

"Sanctuary" Mr. MacKaye's bird masque was first presented under very impressive circumstances. Enacted by a distinguished company, including Miss Eleanor Wilson and Miss Margaret Wilson.

Drama League Chairman

Mrs. O. J. Eastman

Mrs. Osgood Eastman is chairman of the distributing committee for the Drama League this season. With her committee, she mailed more than one thousand envelopes last week, containing the annual announcement folders, largely Mrs.

SOCIETY

Mrs. Clinton Hamilton and son Billy Clayton

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Josephine Congdon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac E. Congdon, to Carl Paulson, son of Mr. and Mrs. N. Paulson. No date has been set for the wedding.

Numbered among Omaha's attractive young matrons is Mrs. Clinton R. Hamilton, formerly Mildred Barber, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. P. T. Barber. Mrs. Hamilton is active in church work and the West Omaha Mothers' Culture club.

A charming addition to the young married set of the city is Mrs. Ralph Renwick, who has come here this fall with Mr. Renwick from Chicago. She is a Vassar graduate of 1913 and is chairman of the Omaha Vassar club committee for the salary endowment fund.

The Birch Grove

Like silver candlesticks you stand. Aflame with glorious autumn leaves Upon earth's altar cloth of green and brown. Aloft a choir of songbirds reign; Sunbeams that have strayed into this sanctuary Between wind-tossed leaves Are happy prisoners in the white-robed bars That rise majestically like an organ's pipes As if to sound an accompaniment To the melody of the birds!

And I who know few holy things Am filled with reverence And offer thanks to Him Who places your beauty in His scheme of things, And treading lightly through the fallen leaves, I go my way As from some temple shrine! —Jack Lee.

Miss Davis Weds Henry Bohling of St. Louis

The wedding of Miss Menie Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Davis, and Mr. Henry Bohling of St. Louis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Bohling of Chicago, was celebrated Saturday evening at 8:30 o'clock at Trinity cathedral.

The bride, who was given away by her father, looked lovely in a gown of white net made over white satin. The net was elaborately trimmed with crystals and pearls. The bodice was cut high and finished without sleeves. A court train hung from the shoulders and the long tulle veil was held in place with a band of pearls.

The bridesmaids were Mrs. Jack Webster, Mrs. Donald M. McFerron of Hoopston, Ill., and Miss Daphne Peters. Miss Elizabeth Davis, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor. She wore a gown of the new fuchsia shade of chiffon, heavily beaded in blue.

Many distinguished guests will be present, and the President of the Junior League, Miss Gertrude Stout, will open the Grand March with the most honored guest.

The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bohling of Chicago, Mrs. Charles Bohling, Mrs. Louise Steiner, Mr. W. H. Hafner and Miss Louise Hardee, all of Chicago. The young couple left the same evening for an eastern wedding trip. They will be at home after December 1 in St. Louis.

Bride of Saturday

Mrs. Edward M. Bailey

Mrs. Edward M. Bailey, who was married in her mother's wedding gown and the coronet and wreath which held her tulle veil were also worn by her mother. Mr. and Mrs. Bailey are honeymooning in the west.

Washington a City of Clubs

By FRANCES DEVEREUX. Washington, Oct. 29.—Club life in Washington is one of the main braces in the structure of companionship. This is apparent even to the casual visitor in Washington, who, although a brief sojourner, has some little opportunity to peep into the room where social conditions are stored.

There are men's clubs and there are women's clubs, and there are clubs which are men and women's clubs. The country clubs, of course, have a large woman membership and curiously enough the rules and regulations of some of these organizations have undergone a change recently to be in keeping with the changed status of women in political life.

The men's social clubs in Washington are the Army and Navy, the Cosmos, the Metropolitan and the University clubs. The Army and Navy club is the most thriving organization financially, at any rate in the Capital city. It has an enormous nonresident membership and as the Junior League. Enlisted men from the Post will be sent in to do guard duty and lend a military touch. All aviators and army officers will appear in uniform.

Many distinguished guests will be present, and the President of the Junior League, Miss Gertrude Stout, will open the Grand March with the most honored guest.

The Congressional club is composed entirely of women. It is, to many minds, the most interesting of all the social organizations in the city of Washington. It has a club house of its own with all the things necessary to make what may be called home club life successful.

Probably the most famous newspaper man's club in the world is the Gridiron Club of Washington. It is solely a dining club. Its dinners are noted, not only for method and manner of the entertainment supplied, but for the presence at them of the highest officials of the American government, including the president of the United States and almost always the ambassadors of the great foreign countries.

Washington club life would be much like the club life elsewhere were it not for the fact that comparatively few of the members of each club are real Washingtonians. Here the club membership is composed of people from all parts of the world. Every club in Washington might be called by the name "cosmopolitan."

The second annual banquet of the Washington Girls' club will be given Saturday evening, November 5, at 7 o'clock. All Nebraska girls who worked in Washington during the war are eligible for membership. A musical program will follow the dinner. The honor guests will be Messrs. Samuel Avery of Lincoln, Norris Brown; Messrs. Charles Loebbeck, R. C. Young, James Henley and Miss Margaret Lobes.
